

Contents

Preface	vii
Acknowledgments	ix
1. INTRODUCTION AND OVERVIEW	1
Part I: Positivism and the Old Divides	2
Part II: Interpretivism and the New Divides	5
Part III: Ethical and Political Frameworks	9
Part I Positivism and the Old Divides
2. TWO DOGMAS OF EDUCATIONAL RESEARCH	15
Dogma 1: The Quantitative/Qualitative Distinction	16
Dogma 2: The Fact/Value Dichotomy	21
Conclusion: Toward Closing the Old Divides	25
3. THE QUANTITATIVE/QUALITATIVE DOGMA	29
The Incompatibility Thesis and Research Practice	30
The Incompatibility Thesis and Epistemological Paradigms	34
Criteria for Evaluating Educational Research	39
Some Observations About Pragmatism	42
Conclusion: Compatibilist Educational Research	44
4. PERSISTENCE OF THE FACT/VALUE DOGMA	47
The Received View and Program Evaluation	48
The Received View and Educational Testing	57
Conclusion: Why the Fact/Value Dogma Persists	61

Part II Interpretivism and the New Divides

5. THE INTERPRETIVE TURN	65
Epistemology	67
The Ontology of the Self	71
Politics	74
Conclusion: Toward Closing the New Divides	79
6. THE CONSTRUCTIVIST TURN	81
Constructivism's Kantian Roots	82
Constructivism and the "Linguistic Turn"	84
The Foundering of Radical Constructivism	90
Conclusion: Toward a Thoroughgoing Constructivism	92
7. ON THE THREAT OF EPISTEMOLOGICAL BIAS	95
What is Bias?	96
What is Epistemology?	97
What is a Biased Epistemology?	100
Conclusion: Controlling Bias Through Inclusion	106

Part III Ethical and Political Frameworks

8. THE INTERPRETIVE TURN AND RESEARCH ETHICS	113
The Traditional Problematic	113
The Contemporary Problematic	118
Conclusion: Continuity Through Change	130
9. TOWARD DEMOCRATIC EDUCATIONAL RESEARCH	133
A General Framework for Democratic Educational Research	135
The Democratic Framework Applied to Educational Policy Research	140
The Democratic Framework Applied to Pedagogical Research	142
Final Remarks	143
References	145

Closing Methodological Divides
Toward Democratic Educational Research

Howe, K.R.

2002, X, 157 p., Softcover

ISBN: 978-1-4020-1226-6