

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This book is a revised version of my Habilitationsschrift, which was accepted at the Humboldt-Universität zu Berlin in 2001. Some people read earlier versions of it and gave me quite detailed comments: Wolfgang Klein, Manfred Krifka, Sebastian Löbner, and Arnim von Stechow. I want to thank them for constructive as well as for critical comments, not to mention their patience and friendship. Many other people commented on parts of the book or gave helpful advice: Rainer Bäuerle, Karin Donhauser and the students in our joint class on "Tempustheorien und die Entwicklung des deutschen Tempussystems", Veronika Ehrich, Christine Erb, Annette Fischer, Andreas Haida, Brigitte Handwerker, Claudia Maienborn, Chris Piñón, Mats Rooth, Nicole Schumacher, Dieter Wunderlich, Ede Zimmermann, and probably some people I forget to mention. Ewald Lang provided ideal working conditions for my research. Gaby Reinsdorf made it possible for me to benefit from these conditions. Paul Kilpatrick corrected my English. I thank them all.

The fundamental ideas of chapter 2 were presented at the conference "Interfaces of grammar" in Tübingen, September 30 - October 3, 1996. Earlier versions of it appeared under the title "The core semantics of the present perfect" in ZAS-Arbeitspapiere Nr. 10, Berlin, 1998, and as "The present perfect in German: Outline of its semantic composition" in Natural Language and Linguistic Theory 19, 2001. The ideas and observations outlined in chapter 3 go back to the paper "Die Lesarten des Perfekts" Literaturwissenschaft und Linguistik 29, 1999. The ideas and much of the data of section 2 of chapter 6 are also presented in "Seit-adverbials and perfect constructions," to appear in the volume Perfect Explorations, edited by Artemis Alexiadou, Monika Rathert, and Arnim von Stechow, Mouton de Gruyter, Berlin. Section 3 of chapter 6 takes up the discussion of the paper "Narrowing down the ExtendedNow," which is published in Audiatur Vox Sapientiae. A Festschrift for Arnim von Stechow, edited by Caroline Féry and Wolfgang Sternefeld, Akademie Verlag, Berlin, 2001.

Writing this book would have been possible without them, but they made up for the trouble writing means in real life: I heartily thank Wolfgang and, most of all, Eva.

The German Perfect

Its semantic composition and its interactions with
