

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

This book is a revised version of chapters 1 to 6 of my (1999) University of Geneva doctoral dissertation. Many people have contributed to this book over the years. First and foremost, I would like to thank Liliane Haegeman, whose contribution has been immeasurable. If I had not been lucky enough to have as inspiring a teacher as her when I was an undergraduate, I might never have started doing linguistics. And more specifically with respect to this book, I owe her an immense debt of gratitude because I benefited from her detailed and helpful comments and her valuable advice from my very first days as a PhD student up to the point when I was preparing the final version of this manuscript.

I would like to thank Luigi Rizzi for his insightful comments on my work at various stages before I submitted my dissertation and later as a member of my thesis committee. His suggestions and those provided to me by the external members of my thesis committee, Susan Pintzuk and Ian Roberts, were extremely helpful for the process of turning the dissertation into a book. This process further benefited greatly from the reports of three anonymous reviewers for Kluwer. Special thanks also go to Tony Kroch. Although the diachronic part of my dissertation, for which his contribution was particularly important, is not included in this book, my stay at UPenn at the very beginning of my PhD turned out to be crucial for the direction my work took in the following years and therefore also for what is presented here.

Many other people have contributed to this book, in particular by providing data and native speaker judgments, but also in various other ways. For this, I would like to thank Enoch Aboh, David Adger, Artemis Alexiadou, Helle Andersen, Frank Beths, Anders Eriksson, Thierry Etchegoyhen, Cecilia Falk, Ger de Haan, Chung-hye Han, Cathrine Fabricius-Hansen, Arild Hestvik, Jarich Hoekstra, Kerstin Hoge, Thorbjörg Hróarsdóttir, Ans van Kemenade, Christopher Laenzlinger, Young-Suk Lee, Christer Platzack, Fritz Povelis, Ellen Prince, Genoveva Puskas, Owen Rambow, Görel Sandström, Beatrice Santorini, Manuela Schönenberger, Ur Shlonsky, Halldor Ármann Sigurðsson, Neil Smith, Knut Tarald Taraldsen, Höskuldur Thráinsson, Øystein Alexander Vangsnes, Sten Vikner, and Jan-Wouter Zwart. I would also like to thank the audiences at the conferences and seminars where I presented parts of the material discussed in this book for valuable comments and suggestions.

Finally, I am grateful to the Universities of Geneva and Reading for providing the ideal environment in which I could carry out the work presented here, and the "Fonds national suisse de la recherche scientifique" for awarding me "a bourse de relève" which allowed me to spend a year abroad to work on my dissertation.

Earlier versions of some of the material presented in this book are contained in articles which have appeared elsewhere. A sketch of the main ideas developed in chapters 2 and 3 appeared as "Deriving Syntactic Effects of Morphological Case by Eliminating Abstract Case" in Lingua 111 (2001), pp. 279-313, and some of the material discussed in chapter 4 is contained in the article "On the Word Order 'XP-Subject' in the Germanic Languages" in The Journal of Comparative Germanic Linguistics 3 (1999), pp. 1-36.

Features, Categories and the Syntax of A-Positions
Cross-Linguistic Variation in the Germanic Languages

Haeberli, E.

2002, X, 381 p., Hardcover

ISBN: 978-1-4020-0854-2