

CONTENTS

Acknowledgments	xi
Introduction	xiii
Chapter 1: Methods and Study Populations	1
1.1. Methods: Narratives and Numbers	1
1.2. Study Populations.....	7
Chapter 2: Bodies and Boundaries	14
Moritz Pedrini: The Immunity Reduction of Oppressed People.....	14
2.1. Self	20
2.2. Time	25
2.3. Body	32
Chapter 3: Translating Medicine to Ordinary People.....	50
Andrea Meier: A Balancing Act	50
3.1. Consuming Medicine	53
3.2. Social Science and Medicine.....	55
3.3. Interacting from Equal to Equal?	59
3.4. Authority Outsourced	67
Chapter 4: Hit Early and Hard?	72
Jeff Dijon: One Day Things Were Good	72
4.1. Usage of Antiretroviral Treatment	74
4.2. The Promise of Power	80
4.3. Negotiating Treatment.....	89
4.4. Sharing Uncertainty.....	95

4.5.	Treating the Compliant Patient.....	97
4.6.	Anticipating the New Realism.....	103
Chapter 5: Fighting over Patients and Power.....		109
Markus Mader: From My Worm's-Eye View.....		109
5.1.	Struggles at the Interface.....	111
5.2.	Knowledge Is Power Is Money	117
5.3.	Who Cures? Who Cares?.....	120
Chapter 6: Evidence vs. Experience.....		123
Luca Granges: Twenty Years from Now We Might Be Judged		123
6.1.	Science and Art	125
6.2.	Evidence-Based Medicine.....	126
6.3.	The View from Below	130
6.4.	The Voice of Experience.....	133
6.5.	The Medium Is the Message.....	139
6.6.	State-of-the-Art Ignorance	145
6.7.	Who Controls Medicine?.....	149
6.8.	Evidence-Based Medicine as a Trojan Horse?.....	151
Chapter 7: Conclusions		157
References		171
Index		183

TABLES

Table 1. Interview partners – people with HIV	8
Table 2. Interview partners – physicians	9
Table 3. Questionnaire response	10
Table 4. Socio-demographic characteristics of people with HIV (part A)	11
Table 5. Socio-demographic characteristics of people with HIV (part B).....	11
Table 6. Socio-demographic characteristics of general practitioners (part A).....	12
Table 7. Socio-demographic characteristics of general practitioners (part B).....	13
Table 8. HIV as comparable to diabetes or cancer (people with HIV)	27
Table 9. HIV as comparable to diabetes or cancer (general practitioners)	27
Table 10. Perceived influence on the course of HIV (people with HIV).....	45
Table 11. Perceived influence on the course of HIV (general practitioners).....	46
Table 12. Patterns of health care.....	61
Table 13. Association between laboratory values and antiretroviral treatment amongst people with HIV	78
Table 14. Who should decide on treatment? (people with HIV)	92
Table 15. Who should decide on treatment? (general practitioners)	92
Table 16. General practitioners' reasons against prescribing antiretroviral treatment	93
Table 17. Why did general practitioners not suggest antiretroviral treatment to their patients?	94
Table 18. Collaboration with the HIV center	116
Table 19. Problems in collaborating with the HIV center	117
Table 20. General practitioners' sources of information.....	142

FIGURES

Figure 1. The AIDS Wonder	31
Figure 2. Man of the Year	36
Figure 3. The Invaders Are Here!.....	40
Figure 4. Moving target.....	41
Figure 5. Positive and negative forces are always in counterbalance.....	43
Figure 6. Changes in health care during the course of the infection.....	60
Figure 7. Antiretroviral treatment in the general practice.....	75
Figure 8. Antiretroviral treatment amongst people with HIV.....	77
Figure 9. Reasons against taking antiretroviral treatment amongst people with HIV	79
Figure 10. Powerful and easy to live with	84
Figure 11. The promise of power	85
Figure 12. We physicians are not paid by the pharmaceutical industry	88
Figure 13. Number of HIV patients per general practitioner.....	115
Figure 14. "Science" expanding into medical work.....	132

The New Era of AIDS

HIV and Medicine in Times of Transition

Kopp, C.

2002, XX, 188 p., Hardcover

ISBN: 978-1-4020-1048-4