PART I

HUSSERL'S ANALYSIS OF TIME-CONSCIOUSNESS IN THE LECTURE COURSE FROM WS '04/'05

CHAPTER 1	THE CONTEXT OF HUSSERL'S FIRST ANALYSIS OF TIME-CONSCIOUSNESS
1.1.	What precedes Husserl's first analysis of time- consciousness
1.1.1.	Introduction	3
1.1.2.	The first part of the lecture course from WS '04/'05: "On Perception"	4
1.1.3.	The third part of the lecture course from WS '04/'05: "Phantasy and Image-Consciousness"	10
1.2.	The starting-point of Husserl's first analysis of time- consciousness
1.2.1.	Justification for the selected texts	19
1.2.2.	General remarks	21
1.2.3.	Discussion with Brentano	28
CHAPTER 2	THE FIRST ANALYSIS OF TIME-CONSCIOUSNESS
2.1.	Outline of the problem
2.1.1.	A. Meinong	39
2.1.2.	L.W. Stern	43
2.1.3.	W. James and C.A. Strong	47
2.1.4.	Recapitulation of the issues concerning the perception of time	52
2.2.	Husserl's analysis of time-consciousness in the lecture course from WS '04/'05
2.2.1.	The temporal character of the perception of time	54

2.2.2.	Primary and secondary memory	63
2.2.3.	Constitution of objective time	72
CHAPTER 3	DEVELOPMENTS IN THE YEARS FOLLOWING THE LECTURE COURSE FROM WS '04/'05
3.1.	The discovery of absolute consciousness
3.1.1.	Husserl's lecture courses from WS '06/'07 and SS '09	79
3.1.2.	The development in Husserl's thought on absolute time-consciousness	83
3.2.	The modifying character of phantasy and primary memory
3.2.1.	Phantasy-modification	91
3.2.2.	The modification in primary memory	94
PART II
HUSSERL'S ANALYSIS OF TIME-CONSCIOUSNESS IN THE L-MANUSCRIPTS
CHAPTER 4	THREE MODELS FOR THE DESCRIPTION OF THE STRUCTURE OF TIME-CONSCIOUSNESS
4.1.	General introduction
4.1.1.	Justification for the selected texts	107
4.1.2.	Introduction of new terminology	111
4.2.	The first model
4.2.1.	Analogy with image-consciousness	116
4.2.2.	Non-tenability of the first model	124
4.2.3.	Problems with the opposite view	128
4.3.	The second model
4.3.1.	Introduction	134
4.3.2.	A mere stream of primal data	136
4.3.3.	Non-tenability of the second model	143
4.4.	The third model
4.4.1.	Introduction	149
4.4.2.	General fulfillment and the self-constitution of the primal stream	158
4.4.3.	Particular fulfillment and the constitution of primary temporal objects	164
4.4.4.	The danger of a new infinite regress	169

CHAPTER 5	THE PERSPECTIVE OF GENETIC PHENOMENOLOGY
5.1.	The role of protention in time-consciousness
5.1.1.	Introduction	175
5.1.2.	The role of protention and retention viewed from the perspective of genetic phenomenology	177
5.1.3.	Protention and retention in Hua XI	181
5.2.	The structure of primal presentation
5.2.1.	Original givenness in primal presentation	188
5.2.2.	Applicability of the schema apprehension – apprehension-content to primal presentation	192
5.3.	Recollection and phantasy
5.3.1.	Phenomenology of recollection	199
5.3.2.	Phantasy and individuation	203
5.4.	Affection and action in the L-manuscripts
5.4.1.	The role of the ego in time-consciousness	209
5.4.2.	Affection and association in Hua XI	216

PART III

HUSSERL'S ANALYSIS OF TIME-CONSCIOUSNESS
IN THE C-MANUSCRIPTS

CHAPTER 6	THE LAST ANALYSIS OF TIME-CONSCIOUSNESS
6.1.	General introduction
6.1.1.	Characteristics of the C-manuscripts	227
6.1.2.	New terminology: the living present	231
6.2.	The context of the analysis of time in the C-manuscripts
6.2.1.	The new meaning of the concept of hyle	237
6.2.2.	A new kind of retention	243
6.3.	Passive intentionality
6.3.1.	Two modes of accomplishment	249
6.3.2.	The egoless tendency	255
6.4.	Constitution of the immanent time of the stream of consciousness
6.4.1.	Introduction	259
6.4.2.	Actual immanent temporalization	263
6.4.3.	The role of association in the C-manuscripts	271
6.5.	Infinite regress in the C-manuscripts
6.5.1.	Self-affection	282
6.5.2.	Two notions of non-originality	284
