

PREFACE

Salomon Maimon died on November 22, 1800 (Kislev 5, 5560). To commemorate the two hundredth anniversary of his death, an international conference was held in Tel-Aviv and Jerusalem. The conference was co-sponsored by Tel Aviv University's School of History, The Franz Rosenzweig Research Center for German-Jewish Literature and Cultural History, The Edelstein Center for the History and Philosophy of Science, Technology and Medicine, both at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem, and by the Van Leer Jerusalem Institute. I wish to thank the respective directors of these institutions for their generous support, and Julia Matveev of the Rosenzweig Center for her cordial collaboration. Yitzhak Melamed and Oded Schechter were exceedingly helpful in planning the conference. I also wish to thank Jan Bransen for his helpful advice.

Carl Ebert edited the papers of the contributors whose mother tongue is not English; Florian Ehrensperger conscientiously checked the references and prepared the bibliography.

Most papers included in this volume are based on papers originally delivered at the conference.

Gideon Freudenthal
Jerusalem, March 2003
(Adar Beth, 5763)

Salomon Maimon: Rational Dogmatist, Empirical Skeptic

Critical Assessments

Freudenthal, G. (Ed.)

2003, VII, 304 p., Hardcover

ISBN: 978-1-4020-1473-4