

CONTENTS

Notes on the Contributors	ix
Acknowledgements	xi
Introduction Heather Dyke	1
Part I. At the Time/Ethics Intersection
What Moral Realism Can Learn From The Philosophy Of Time Heather Dyke	11
Prudence, Identity and Value Ramon Das	27
Part II. The Ethical Significance of Temporal Location
Moral Realism and Infinite Spacetime Imply Moral Nihilism Quentin Smith	43
Time and Punishment Michael J. Zimmerman	55
Intergenerational Responsibilities and the Interests of the Dead Janna Thompson	71
Time and Well-Being Andrew Moore	85
Ethics and Temporality: When are Moral Propositions True? Peter Caws	99
The Moral Relevance of Past Preferences Krister Bykvist	115
Saying and Showing the Good Panayot Butchvarov	137

Part III. Persons as Temporal and Ethical Beings

Personal Identity, Responsibility and Time L. Nathan Oaklander	161
Empathy, Immediacy and Morality Michael Slote	179
Persons in Time: Metaphysics and Ethics T. D. J. Chappell	189
The Non-Identity Problem Tim Mulgan	209
Diachronic Obligation William Grey	219
Index	237

Time and Ethics

Essays at the Intersection

Dyke, H.L. (Ed.)

2003, XI, 241 p., Hardcover

ISBN: 978-1-4020-1312-6