

Contents

Back to Basics: Structure, Function, Evolution and Application of Homing Endonucleases and Inteins . . . . .	1
MARLENE BELFORT

1	Introduction: Back to Basics . . . . .	1
2	What Is a Homing Endonuclease? . . . . .	2
3	What Is an Intein? . . . . .	4
4	Inteins and Homing Endonucleases as Molecular Mosaics .	4
5	Applications: “Turning Junk into Gold” . . . . .	6
5.1	Site-Specific Group I Intron and Intein Endonucleases . . .	6
5.2	Gene Targeting by a Group II Intron RNP Complex. . . . .	6
5.3	“Inteins ... Nature’s Gift to the Protein Chemist”. . . . .	8
6	The Message . . . . .	9
	References. . . . .	10

Homing Endonucleases and the Yeast Mitochondrial <math>\omega</math> Locus – A Historical Perspective . . . . .	11
BERNARD DUJON

1	The First Years of Yeast Mitochondrial Genetics . . . . .	11
2	Genetic and Molecular Characterization of the $\omega$ Locus . .	13
3	The Problems of Mitochondrial Intronic Reading Frames and Their Products. . . . .	17
4	Group I and Group II Introns, and RNA Splicing . . . . .	18
5	First Clues to the Function of the Translation Product of the $\omega$ Intronic Reading Frame . . .	19
6	Expressing the $\omega$ Intron-Encoded Protein in a Heterologous System . . . . .	21
7	The Unusual Enzymatic Properties of the Group I Intron-Encoded Homing Endonuclease I-SceI . . .	22

8	The First Additional Homing Endonucleases Discovered after I-SceI . . . . .	23
9	Use of the I-SceI Endonuclease in Heterologous Systems . . . . .	24
10	Epilogue . . . . .	26
	References . . . . .	26
 The LAGLIDADG Homing Endonuclease Family . . . . .		33
BRETT CHEVALIER, RAYMOND J. MONNAT, JR., BARRY L. STODDARD
1	Introduction . . . . .	33
2	Structures of LAGLIDADG Homing Endonucleases. . . . .	35
3	Mechanisms of DNA Target Site Recognition and Specificity . . . . .	38
4	Mechanism of DNA Cleavage. . . . .	41
	References . . . . .	45
 HNH Endonucleases . . . . .		49
ANTHONY H. KEEBLE, MARÍA J. MATÉ, COLIN KLEANTHOUS
1	Introduction . . . . .	49
2	The HNH Family – A Tree of Three Branches . . . . .	50
2.1	The HNH Consensus Sequence. . . . .	50
2.2	The Cysteine-Containing HNH Motif (cysHNH) . . . . .	51
2.3	The HNN Variant. . . . .	52
2.4	The HNH Motif Is Part of the Wider $\beta\beta\alpha$ -Me Superfamily of Endonucleases . . . . .	52
3	Enzymology of HNH/ $\beta\beta\alpha$ -Me Motif Endonucleases . . . . .	54
3.1	The HNH/ $\beta\beta\alpha$ -Me Motif Is Functionally Adaptable. . . . .	54
3.2	Biochemical Properties . . . . .	56
3.3	HNH/ $\beta\beta\alpha$ -Me Enzymes Require Single Divalent Cations for Activity . . . . .	57
4	Structural Analysis of HNH Endonuclease Mediated dsDNA Cleavage. . . . .	58
4.1	Relaxation of Substrate Strain is Conserved in the Cleavage Mechanisms of HNH/ $\beta\beta\alpha$ -Me Enzymes. . . . .	58
4.2	Metal Ion Coordination in the DNA-Bound Complex. . . . .	59
4.3	Mechanism of $Mg^{2+}$ -Dependent Cleavage by HNH Endonucleases and Why $Zn^{2+}$ Does Not Support Catalytic Activity. . . . .	60

Contents	VII
5 Conclusions . . . . .	62
References . . . . .	63
 GIY-YIG Homing Endonucleases – Beads on a String. . . . .	67
PATRICK VAN ROEY, VICTORIA DERBYSHIRE
1 Introduction . . . . .	67
2 Occurrence and Functions of GIY-YIG Enzymes . . . . .	69
3 I-TevI as the Model GIY-YIG Enzyme:
Structure and Function . . . . .	70
3.1 Catalytic Domain. . . . .	71
3.2 DNA-Binding Domain. . . . .	74
3.3 Flexible Linker and Distance Determination . . . . .	75
3.4 I-TevI Endonuclease Is Bifunctional,
Also Serving As a Transcriptional Autorepressor . . . . .	77
4 DNA-Binding Domain Diversity and Conserved Modules .	79
References . . . . .	81
 His-Cys Box Homing Endonucleases . . . . .	85
ERIC A. GALBURT, MELISSA S. JURICA
1 The His-Cys Box Family of Homing Endonucleases. . . . .	86
2 Expression of His-Cys Box Homing
Endonucleases from Nuclear rDNA Transcripts . . . . .	89
3 Structure, DNA Binding, and Catalytic Mechanism . . . . .	91
3.1 Structure of a His-Cys Box Endonuclease: I-PpoI . . . . .	91
3.2 DNA Binding and Recognition . . . . .	93
3.3 Catalytic Mechanism . . . . .	96
3.3.1 Catalytic Metal Coordination. . . . .	96
3.3.2 Alignment and Activation of the Hydrolytic Water . . . . .	97
3.3.3 Conformational Changes and
Transition State Stabilization . . . . .	98
4 HNH and His-Cys Box Homing Endonucleases . . . . .	99
References . . . . .	100

Group I Introns and Their Maturases:*Uninvited, but Welcome, Guests . . . . . 103

MARK G. CAPRARA, RICHARD B. WARING

1	Discovery of Self-Splicing Group I Introns . . . . .	104
2	Genes Within Introns . . . . .	106
3	How Many Maturases? . . . . .	106
4	The Mechanism of Maturase-Assisted Splicing . . . . .	107
5	Maturases Cooperate with Other Proteins for Splicing . . .	110
6	Maturases or DNA Endonucleases? . . . . .	110
7	How Intertwined Are the DNA and RNA Activities in Maturases? . . . . .	111
8	Evolution of Maturase Activity . . . . .	113
9	Concluding Remarks. . . . .	114
	References. . . . .	116

Group II Intron Homing Endonucleases: Ribonucleoprotein*Complexes with Programmable Target Specificity. . . . . 121

ALAN M. LAMBOWITZ, GEORG MOHR, STEVEN ZIMMERLY

1	Introduction . . . . .	121
2	Group II Intron Structure. . . . .	122
3	Catalytic Properties of the Intron RNA . . . . .	122
4	Biochemical Activities of Group II Intron-Encoded Proteins . . . . .	125
5	Mobility Mechanisms . . . . .	126
6	Binding of the IEP to the Intron RNA . . . . .	128
7	DNA Target Site Recognition by Group II Intron Homing Endonucleases . . . . .	130
8	DNA Target Site Recognition by Ll.LtrB Intron RNPs. . . .	132
9	Group II Introns as Gene-Targeting Vectors . . . . .	135
	References. . . . .	141

Free-Standing Homing Endonucleases of T-Even Phage:*Freeloaders or Functionaries? . . . . . 147

DAVID R. EDGELL

1	Introduction . . . . .	147
2	When Is a Free-Standing Endonuclease a Homing Endonuclease? . . . . .	148

Contents	IX
----------	----

3	Intronless Homing and Marker Exclusion . . . . .	149
4	The Recognition Sites of Free-Standing Endonucleases Are Distinct from the Endonuclease Insertion Site . . . . .	152
5	How Do Free-Standing Endonucleases Prevent Cleavage of Their Host Genome? . . . . .	153
6	The Separation of Cleavage and Insertion Sites Influences Endonuclease Mobility . . . . .	154
7	The Sporadic Distribution of Free-Standing Homing Endonucleases . . . . .	155
8	The "Function" of Free-Standing Endonucleases. . . . .	156
9	The Diversity of Endonuclease Function . . . . .	157
	References . . . . .	158

Function and Evolution of HO and VDE Endonucleases in Fungi . . . . . 161
JAMES E. HABER, KENNETH H. WOLFE

1	Introduction . . . . .	161
2	Mating-Type Genes in S. cerevisiae . . . . .	162
3	HO-Induced MAT Switching in S. cerevisiae . . . . .	163
4	Mechanism of MAT Switching . . . . .	164
5	Donor Preference Associated with MAT Switching . . . . .	164
6	Evolutionary Origins of the HO Gene and Other Components of the MAT Switching System . . . . .	166
7	Linkage of an HM Cassette with the Recombination Enhancer (RE) . . . . .	167
8	The HO Endonuclease Site in MAT $\alpha$ 1 . . . . .	168
9	Relationship of HO to VDE . . . . .	169
10	Hypothesis for the Evolutionary Origin of HO. . . . .	172
	References . . . . .	173

Engineering Homing Endonucleases for Genomic Applications . . . . 177
FREDERICK S. GIMBLE

1	Introduction . . . . .	177
2	The Modular Organization of Homing Endonucleases and Their Endonucleolytic Activity . . . . .	178
3	Probing the Modular Structure of Homing Endonucleases by Protein Engineering . . . . .	180

4	Engineering Homing Enzymes with Novel Functions. . . .	182
4.1	Changing the Recognition Site Specificity of Homing Endonucleases . . . . .	182
4.1.1	Altering Homing Endonuclease Specificity by Domain Shuffling. . . . .	182
4.1.2	Altering Homing Endonuclease Specificity Using Genetic Screens and Selections . . . . .	185
4.2	Introducing Molecular Switches into Homing Endonucleases . . . . .	189
5	Conclusions and Future Prospects. . . . .	190
	References. . . . .	190

Inteins – A Historical Perspective . . . . . 193
FRANCINE B. PERLER

1	Introduction . . . . .	194
2	Efforts To Prove That Splicing Is Post-translational . . . .	194
3	Intein Motifs and Conserved Residues . . . . .	195
4	Intein Polymorphisms and Non-canonical Inteins . . . . .	197
5	Criteria for Intein Designation . . . . .	198
6	The Minimal Splicing Element . . . . .	198
7	Splicing of Split Inteins: Trans -Splicing . . . . .	199
8	The Influence of Exteins and Insertion Site Characteristics. . . . .	200
9	The Challenge of Deciphering the Protein-Splicing Mechanism . . . . .	201
10	Splicing of Non-canonical Inteins . . . . .	204
11	Why Are Inteins So Robust? . . . . .	205
12	Control, Control, Control . . . . .	205
13	Perspectives for the Future . . . . .	206
	References. . . . .	207

Origin and Evolution of Inteins and Other Hint Domains. . . . . 211
BARAKET DASSA, SHMUEL PIETROKOVSKI

1	Introduction . . . . .	211
2	Hint Domain Families . . . . .	213
2.1	Inteins . . . . .	213
2.1.1	Inteins Include Different Domains. . . . .	213
2.1.2	Intein Protein Hosts and Insertion Points . . . . .	214

Contents	XI
----------	----

2.1.3	Inteins Are Sporadically Distributed. . . . .	215
2.1.4	A Non-selfish Intein-Derived Protein . . . . .	216
2.1.5	Split Inteins . . . . .	217
2.2	Hog-Hint Domains . . . . .	218
2.2.1	Phylogenetic Distribution of Hog-Hint Domains . . . . .	218
2.3	BIL-Hint Domains . . . . .	220
2.3.1	Phylogenetic Distribution of BIL Domains . . . . .	221
2.3.2	Protein Distribution of BIL Domains . . . . .	222
2.3.3	Biochemical Activity and Biological Roles of BIL Domains . . . . .	222
2.4	Other Hint Domains . . . . .	224
3	Origin of the Hint Domains . . . . .	225
3.1	Features of the Progenitor Hint Domain . . . . .	225
3.2	Emergence of the Progenitor Hint Domain. . . . .	227
	References . . . . .	229

Biochemical Mechanisms of Intein-Mediated Protein Splicing . . . . . 233

KENNETH V. MILLS, HENRY PAULUS

1	Conserved Features of Intein Structure . . . . .	234
2	The Canonical Protein-Splicing Mechanism . . . . .	234
2.1	First Step of Protein Splicing – N/O or N/S Acyl Shift. . . . .	235
2.2	Second Step of Protein Splicing – Transesterification . . . . .	238
2.3	Third Step of Protein Splicing – Asparagine Cyclization . . . . .	240
2.4	Finishing Reaction . . . . .	241
2.5	Association of Split Inteins . . . . .	242
3	Non-canonical Inteins and Their Mechanisms . . . . .	243
3.1	Substitution of the N-Terminal Nucleophile . . . . .	243
3.2	Substitution of the C-Terminal Asparagine. . . . .	245
3.3	Hedgehog Autoprocessing Domains . . . . .	245
3.4	Bacterial Intein-Like Domains . . . . .	246
4	Protein Splicing as a System . . . . .	247
4.1	Side Reactions . . . . .	247
4.2	What Coordinates the Steps in the Protein-Splicing Pathway? . . . . .	249
5	Conclusions . . . . .	251
	References . . . . .	252

The Structure and Function of Intein-Associated

Homing Endonucleases . . . . . 257

CARMEN M. MOURE, FLORANTE A. QUIOCHO

1	Introduction . . . . .	257
2	Architecture of Inteins: A Two-Domain Organization. . . .	258
2.1	The Splicing Domain . . . . .	260
2.2	Endonuclease Domain. . . . .	261
3	DNA Binding to the Splicing and Endonuclease Domains of PI-SceI . . . . .	261
3.1	Protein–DNA Contacts Across the Splicing and Endonuclease Domains . . . . .	263
3.2	Protein Conformational Changes . . . . .	263
3.3	DNA Bending. . . . .	264
3.4	DNA Recognition. . . . .	266
4	DNA Cleavage. . . . .	266
4.1	Active Sites . . . . .	266
4.2	Divalent Metal Binding at the Active Sites . . . . .	267
	References. . . . .	269

Harnessing Inteins for Protein Purification and Characterization. . . 273

SHAORONG CHONG, MING-QUN XU

1	Introduction . . . . .	273
2	Intein Fusion Systems for Protein Purification. . . . .	273
2.1	C-Terminal Fusion System . . . . .	275
2.2	N-Terminal Fusion System . . . . .	277
2.3	Choosing an Appropriate Intein Fusion System . . . . .	278
2.4	Choosing an Appropriate Residue at the Fusion Junction .	280
2.5	Conditions for Intein Cleavage . . . . .	281
2.6	Intein Fusion Systems for High-Throughput and Large-Scale Applications. . . . .	283
3	Protein trans -Splicing and Cleavage Systems. . . . .	283
4	Intein-Mediated Protein Ligation (IPL) . . . . .	284
4.1	Intein-Mediated Peptide Array (IPA) . . . . .	286
4.2	Kinase Assays Using Carrier Protein–Peptide Substrates. .	288
4.3	Purification of Peptide-Specific Antibody . . . . .	289
5	Remarks and Conclusions. . . . .	289
	References. . . . .	290

Production of Cyclic Proteins and Peptides . . . . .	293
ALI TAVASSOLI, TODD A. NAUMANN, STEPHEN J. BENKOVIC

1	Introduction . . . . .	293
1.1	Naturally Occurring Cyclic Peptides. . . . .	293
1.2	Intein-Mediated Cyclization . . . . .	295
2	Intein-Mediated Ligation . . . . .	295
3	TWIN . . . . .	297
4	trans - and cis -Splicing. . . . .	298
5	Cyclization with Artificially Split Inteins . . . . .	299
6	SICLOPPS . . . . .	300
7	Summary . . . . .	302
	References . . . . .	302

Inteins for Split-Protein Reconstitutions and Their Applications . . .	307
TAKEAKI OZAWA, YOSHIO UMEZAWA

1	Introduction . . . . .	307
2	General Characteristics of Protein Splicing. . . . .	308
3	Reporter Protein Reconstitution . . . . .	309
3.1	Detection of Protein–Protein Interactions . . . . .	311
3.2	Protein Splicing in Intracellular Organelles. . . . .	315
3.2.1	Identification of Organelle-Localized Proteins from cDNA Libraries . . . . .	315
3.2.2	Detection of Protein Nuclear Transport. . . . .	317
3.2.3	trans -Splicing in the Chloroplast in Plant Cells . . . . .	319
3.3	Screening of Potential Antimycobacterial Agents . . . . .	320
4	Future Directions. . . . .	321
	References . . . . .	322

Intein Reporter and Selection Systems . . . . .	325
DAVID W. WOOD, GEORGIOS SKRETAS

1	Introduction . . . . .	325
2	Systems for Direct Observation of Intein Function . . . . .	327
3	Selection and Reporter Systems for Intein Function . . . . .	328
3.1	Insertion into the LacZ $\alpha$ Gene . . . . .	331
3.2	Insertion into the Saccharomyces cerevisiae VAT2 Gene . . . . .	331
3.3	Thymidylate Synthase System for Selection in vivo . . . . .	332

3.4	Kanamycin Resistance: the ORFTRAP System . . . . .	333
3.5	DNA gyraseA: Negative Selection for Splicing in vivo . . . .	334
3.6	Bacterial ccdB: Negative Selection for Splicing or Cleaving . . . . .	335
3.7	T4 DNA Polymerase: Negative-Splicing Selection in vivo . . . . .	336
3.8	Yeast Gal4 Gene: Temperature-Sensitive Splicing in vivo . . . . .	337
3.9	Green Fluorescent Protein: Reporter for Splicing in vitro . . . . .	338
3.10	trans -Splicing Intein Systems. . . . .	339
4	Summary . . . . .	340
	References . . . . .	341

Industrial Applications of Intein Technology. . . . . 345

DAVID W. WOOD, SARAH W. HARCUM, GEORGES BELFORT

1	Introduction . . . . .	346
2	Scale-Up of Intein Processes . . . . .	346
2.1	Conventional Affinity Tag Processes. . . . .	347
2.2	Intein-Mediated Protein Purification . . . . .	347
2.2.1	Modeling Large-Scale Intein Bioseparations . . . . .	348
2.2.2	Economics of the IMPACT Process Scale-Up. . . . .	350
2.3	Economic Optimization of Intein-Based Bioseparations . .	350
2.3.1	Buffers . . . . .	351
2.3.2	Resins . . . . .	353
2.3.3	Alternate Intein-Cleaving Modes. . . . .	354
2.4	Economics of an Optimal Large-Scale Intein Process . . . .	355
2.5	Additional Considerations for Intein Process Scale-Up . . .	356
3	Scale-Down of Intein Processes . . . . .	357
3.1	Microfluidics . . . . .	358
3.2	Protein Micro-arrays. . . . .	361
4	Summary . . . . .	362
	References . . . . .	363

Subject Index . . . . . 365

<http://www.springer.com/978-3-540-85235-3>

Homing Endonucleases and Inteins

Belfort, M.; Stoddard, B.L.; Wood, D.W.; Derbyshire, V.

(Eds.)

2005, XIX, 377 p., Softcover

ISBN: 978-3-540-85235-3