

Contents

Part 1 A Critique of Mainstream Psycholinguistics

1 The Problematic	3
Chapter Prospectus	3
What's It All About?	3
Historical Beginnings of Mainstream Psycholinguistics	4
The More Remote Background of Modern Psycholinguistics	5
The Cognitive Revolution	5
Some Current Criticisms of Mainstream Psycholinguistics	6
The Centrality of Grammar in Mainstream Psycholinguistics	7
Ideal Delivery: A Corollary of Syntactic Well-formedness	8
The Users of Language	10
The Autonomy of Language	12
2 Empirical Methods	13
Chapter Prospectus	13
Homo Loquens et Audiens	13
Transmittal of Data by Transcribers	15
The Experimental Method	16
Fellow Travelers of Psycholinguistics	16
An Example of Experimental Psycholinguistics	17
The Demand for Continuity in Speaking	18
Methodology in Psycholinguistic Textbooks: The Relationship of Data and Theory	19
Monologism	20
A Monologicistic Approach to Dialogue	21
Turn-Taking	22
Methodological Individualism	22
The Need for Normalization of Data	23
Access to Corpora of Spontaneous Spoken Discourse	23
Use of Transcripts Prepared by Others	24
Back to Issues of Control	25
Concluding Remarks	26

3	Fluency and Hesitation	27
	Chapter Prospectus	27
	Chicken or Egg?	27
	Ideal Delivery vs. Discontinuity	30
	The Use of Time for the Sake of the Speaker	31
	The Use of Time for the Sake of the Listener	32
	Fluency	33
4	The Written	35
	Chapter Prospectus	35
	Verba Volant, Scripta Manent	35
	Generation and the Written	36
	The Written as the Cadaver of Speech	38
	Transcription	39
	Transcription as Theory	43
 Part 2 Foundations for Research on Spontaneous Spoken Discourse
5	Rhetoric	47
	Chapter Prospectus	47
	What Rhetoric Is All About	47
	Some Typographical Helps to Rhetoric	50
	Some Prosodic Principles	50
	Some Other Relevant Measures of Rhetorical Performance	51
	Literacy and Orality	53
	Orality as a Rationale for Our Research	55
	A Rhetorical Perspective for Everyday Talk	56
6	Intentionality	57
	Chapter Prospectus	57
	Starting, Stopping, and Continuing	57
	A Historical Note on Intentionality	60
7	From Monologism to Dialogicality	63
	Chapter Prospectus	63
	Where Are We?	63
	Mainstream Psycholinguistics and Monologism	66
	Is All Human Speech in Principle Dialogical?	68
8	Listening	69
	Chapter Prospectus	69
	Listening vs. Hearing	69
	The Listener's Disappearing Act	71
	Agonistic Listeners?	73

The Transcendence of Listening	73
The Ideal Listener	74
Types of Listeners	74
Active Silence	75

Part 3 Empirical Research on Spontaneous Spoken Discourse

9 Punctuation	79
Chapter Prospectus	79
Benign Neglect	79
Syntax, Rhetoric, or Both?	80
What Can Punctuation Tell Us About Reading Aloud?	81
The Written Without Punctuation	84
Other Concepts of Punctuation	85
The Problem of Reading Quotation Marks Aloud.	85
10 Transcription	89
Chapter Prospectus	89
The Transcriber as Language User	89
Some Transcriber Difficulties and Biases	90
Slips of the Ear	92
Some Limitations of Transcripts.	93
Reproduction of Transcripts for Research Purposes	94
The Diagnosis	96
11 Pauses	99
Chapter Prospectus	99
On Again, Off Again.	100
The History of Pause Research: Pausology	101
Off-time as a Research Problem	103
A Benevolent Take-over by Conversation-analytic Researchers . . .	104
The Proper Temporal Dimensionality of Pauses: Measurement . . .	105
Our Own Research on Pauses.	106
Silence	109
12 Prosody	113
Chapter Prospectus	113
The Concept	113
Prosody and Meaning.	115
The Transcription of Prosody.	116
Research	117
Our Research on Articulation Rate	119
Futuristics	119

13	Fillers	121
	Chapter Prospectus	121
	The Remarkably Versatile Schwa	121
	The Lexicographer's Written World of Fillers	122
	Fillers in Written Materials	125
	Some Filler History: The Carrier of Disfluency	126
	What Are Fillers Really Good For?	127
	Our Own Research on Fillers	129
	The Failure to Legitimize Fillers as Words	130
14	Interjections	133
	Chapter Prospectus	133
	Some History	133
	Interjections in Modern Language Sciences	135
	Recent Empirical Research	136
15	Referring	143
	Chapter Prospectus	143
	Referring	143
	Deixis	144
	Laughter as a Nonverbal Self-reference	146
	Some Recent Research on Referring	146
16	Turn-taking	149
	Chapter Prospectus	149
	Categories of Turn-taking	149
	Is There a Normal or an Ideal Form of Sequencing?	151
	Some History	153
	Schegloff (2007)	156
	Turn-taking, Gender, and Power	158
	Recent Research	159
	Our Research	160
	A Perspective on Turn-taking	160
17	Laughter	163
	Chapter Prospectus	163
	Science Times	163
	Some History	164
	Definitions	165
	Methodology	166
	Psychological Approaches	167
	Further Questions about Psychological Research	168
	Conversation-analytic Research	170
	Chafe (2007)	171

18	Applause and Other Audience Reactions	175
	Chapter Prospectus	175
	Applause and Laughter: A Comparison	176
	Some History of Applause	177
	Empirical Research on Applause to Political Oratory	178
	Empirical Research on Laughter as an Audience Reaction	182
	Empirical Research on Booing as an Audience Reaction	182
	Audience-to-audience Responses	183
	The Listener's Golden Opportunities	185
	Some Comparisons between Individual Listeners and Audiences . .	186
 Part 4 Toward a Theory of Spontaneous Spoken Discourse
19	Intersubjectivity	189
	Chapter Prospectus	189
	The Principle of Intersubjectivity as a Problem in Literary Stylistics	189
	A Psychological Concept of Intersubjectivity	190
20	Perspectivity	193
	Chapter Prospectus	193
	The Basic Concept of Perspectivity	193
	Mine and Thine	195
	Dialogicality	196
	Perspectivity and Intersubjectivity	198
21	Open-endedness	201
	Chapter Prospectus	201
	The Concept of Open-endedness	201
	Spontaneity	202
	A Methodological Problem	203
	The Psychology of Open-endedness	205
22	Verbal Integrity	207
	Chapter Prospectus	207
	The Concept of Verbal Integrity	208
	The Authors' Preoccupation with Verbal Integrity	209
	Verbal Integrity as an Essential Component of Spontaneous Spoken Discourse	209
	Some Examples	211
	Ethics	212
23	Spontaneous Spoken Discourse	213
	Chapter Prospectus	213
	Syntax	213
	Beyond Sentential Syntax	215

Back to Psychology	217
A Theory	218
Throwaways	219
Splendid Isolation?	223
24 Communicating in Print about Communicating Orally	225
References	231
Name Index	253
Subject Index	259

<http://www.springer.com/978-0-387-77631-6>

Communicating with One Another
Toward a Psychology of Spontaneous Spoken
Discourse

Kowal, S.

2008, XXII, 265 p., Hardcover

ISBN: 978-0-387-77631-6