

Contents

1	Introduction	1
1.1	Introduction	1
1.1.1	ICT Use to Support Learning	2
1.1.2	Communities of Practice	2
1.2	The Fieldwork	5
1.3	The Plan of this Book	6
2	Theoretical Foundation	7
2.1	Introduction	7
2.2	Research in Cognate Areas Relevant to the Topic	8
2.2.1	Situated Cognition	8
2.2.2	Organizational Learning	9
2.2.3	Communities of Practice	11
2.2.4	Knowledge Management	16
2.2.5	Information and Communication Technologies	21
2.3	Summary of What is Known and Unknown	22
3	Ethnographic Accounts of a Community of Practice in Square County	25
3.1	Public Defenders	25
3.2	Site Description	26
3.3	What it is like to be a Public Defender	28
3.3.1	Public Defenders' Daily Practices	28
3.3.2	Nature of Public Defenders' Job	32
3.4	Two Public Defenders' Trials	33
3.4.1	Alisha's Trial	34
3.4.2	Nick's Trial	39
3.4.3	Comparison of Two Trials (Commentary)	44
4	Characteristics of a Community of Practice in Square County	47
4.1	Introduction	47
4.2	Autonomous Learners: Striving to Become Better Public Defenders	49

4.2.1	Formal and Informal Learning Opportunities	51
4.2.2	Practical Knowledge versus Book Knowledge	53
4.3	Collective Knowledge Building	56
4.4	Professional Pride	60
4.5	Adversity	62
4.5.1	Client (Dis)Satisfaction	63
4.5.2	Criteria for Success	67
4.5.3	Commentary	70
4.6	Individualized Work Style and Personality	70
4.7	Unique Culture of the Office	73
4.7.1	Supportive Culture	73
4.7.2	Leadership and Autonomy	75
4.7.3	Reality of the Supportive Culture	77
4.8	Commentary	77
5	Communities of Practice and Information Technologies in the Circle County Public Defender's Office	79
5.1	Site Description	80
5.2	IT as Support for Practice in the Circle County Public Defender's Office	81
5.2.1	Differences between Younger Attorneys and Experienced Attorneys	83
5.3	Younger Attorneys, Communities of Practice, and IT Support of Identity Formation	85
5.3.1	Younger Attorneys in Communities of Practice	85
5.3.2	Isolation, Overload, and Work Specialization	88
5.3.3	Professional Identity among Younger Attorneys	90
5.3.4	Younger Attorneys' Heavy Reliance on IT	91
5.4	IT Supports Practice, but Not Identity Formation	92
5.5	Commentary	93
6	Online Communities of Practice: Beyond Organizational Boundaries	95
6.1	Online Community of Practice among Public Defenders	95
6.2	Online Communities of Practice for Other Professions	99
6.2.1	Sites Descriptions	99
6.3	Types of Knowledge	100
6.4	Types of Knowledge Shared in Online Communities of Practice ...	101
6.5	What Makes Knowledge Sharing Sustainable in Online Communities of Practice?	104
6.5.1	Relationships Among the Six Factors	108
6.6	Commentary	109
7	Toward an Understanding of Communities of Practice	113
7.1	Characteristics of Communities of Practice	113
7.1.1	Social Construction of Knowledge in Communities of Practice: Three Kinds of Knowledge	113

7.1.2	Why it Does Not Support Identity Formation	116
7.1.3	Professional Socialization and Identity	116
7.1.4	Organizational Learning and Communities of Practice	117
7.2	Communities of Practice & IT Integration	119
7.2.1	Differences between Online and Face-to-Face Communities of Practice	120
7.3	Implications of this Study for Further Research and Development . .	121
7.3.1	Implications for Education	121
7.3.2	Implications for Information Science	121
7.3.3	Implications for Communities of Practice	122
7.4	Epilogue	123
Appendix A: Cast of Characters		125
Appendix B: Types of Activities		127
References		129

Communities of Practice
Fostering Peer-to-Peer Learning and Informal
Knowledge Sharing in the Work Place

Hara, N.

2009, XII, 138 p. 4 illus., Hardcover

ISBN: 978-3-540-85423-4