

Contents

1 Privacy	1
1.1 Introduction	1
1.2 The Definition of Privacy	2
1.2.1 Different Views on the Meaning of Privacy	2
1.2.2 Difficulties in Defining Privacy	4
1.2.3 Towards a Working Definition of Privacy in China	5
1.3 The Values of Privacy	9
1.4 Privacy and Technology	10
1.5 Conclusion	11
References	11
2 Recent Developments Threatening Privacy in China	13
2.1 Introduction	13
2.2 Increasing Official Powers	14
2.2.1 Political Basis for Increasing Official Powers	14
2.2.2 Entry and Search	15
2.2.3 Arrest and Detention	20
2.2.4 Evaluation of Official Powers	22
2.3 New Methods of Business Practices in China	23
2.3.1 Increasing New Marketing Practices	23
2.3.2 Private Security Officers and Investigators	23
2.3.3 New Business Practices Threatening Information Privacy	24
2.4 New Technology in China	25
2.4.1 Information Processing Technology	25
2.4.2 New Surveillance Technology	27
2.4.3 Other Areas	28
2.5 Need for Privacy Protection	29
References	29

3	China's Privacy Standards	33
3.1	Introduction	33
3.2	Privacy in Ancient China	34
3.2.1	Traditional Definition of Privacy	34
3.2.2	Traditional Protection for Privacy	35
3.2.3	Possible Theories to Explain the Insufficient Level of Privacy Protection in Ancient China	37
3.2.4	Summary	40
3.3	Privacy in Modern China	40
3.3.1	The Development and Changes of Privacy Ideas in Contemporary China	40
3.3.2	Modern Definition of Privacy in China	43
3.3.3	Subjects Enjoying Privacy Protection	44
3.3.4	Neutrality of Chinese Privacy Protection	48
3.3.5	Existing Statutory Protections for Privacy in Modern China	50
3.3.6	Possible Theories to Explain the Insufficient Level of Privacy Protection in Contemporary China	62
3.3.7	Summary	69
3.4	The Possible Development Trend of Privacy in Contemporary Chinese Society	70
3.4.1	The Development Trend of the Public Consciousness of Privacy in Contemporary Chinese Society	70
3.4.2	The Development Trend of the Theoretical Basis of Privacy in Contemporary Chinese Society	71
3.5	Conclusion	73
	References	73
4	The Legal Protection of Privacy in International Practices: Potential as Models for a Chinese Privacy Protection Regime	77
4.1	Introduction	77
4.2	International Standards	78
4.2.1	International Human Rights Instruments	78
4.2.2	International Data Protection Law	81
4.3	Legal Protection of Privacy in Some Selected Western Countries	86
4.3.1	Countries with the Common Law Legal System	86
4.3.2	Countries with the Civil Law Legal System	112
4.3.3	Evaluation of Different Approaches	129
4.3.4	Conclusion	131
4.4	What Can China Learn from Other Jurisdictions?	132
4.4.1	Main Models of Western Privacy Protection	132

4.4.2 How the Western Laws Deal with Recognized Privacy Risks	133
4.5 Issues for Further Consideration	137
References	138
5 Creating the Right to Privacy in the Chinese Legal System	145
5.1 Introduction	145
5.2 Arguments for the Creation of the Right to Privacy in China	146
5.3 Privacy Interests and Right to Privacy	147
5.3.1 Privacy Interests and Its Protection	147
5.3.2 Balancing Different Interests to Achieve the Right to Privacy in China	150
5.4 Interests Complementary to Privacy in China	150
5.4.1 Interests in Portrait	151
5.4.2 Interests in Reputation	152
5.4.3 Interests in Freedom from Discrimination	154
5.4.4 Summary	155
5.5 Interests Competing with Privacy in China	155
5.5.1 Freedom of Expression Versus Privacy	155
5.5.2 Freedom of the Press versus Privacy	160
5.5.3 Other Possible Competing Interests in China	162
5.6 Conclusion	163
References	163
6 Establishing an Effective Personal Information Protection Regime in China	165
6.1 Introduction	165
6.2 Developing Constitutional Protection	166
6.3 Information Privacy Protection Law	167
6.3.1 Guideline or Legislation?	167
6.3.2 Privacy Protection and Personal Information Protection	169
6.3.3 Should the Chinese Information Protection Legislation Apply to the Private Sector?	169
6.3.4 Effective Information Privacy Protection Legislation	170
6.4 Existing Laws and Structures	187
6.4.1 International Context	187
6.4.2 Existing Laws and Structures	187
6.4.3 Uniformity of Standards	190
6.5 The Role of Chinese Government	192
6.6 The Role of The Chinese Privacy Protection Law	193
6.6.1 Principles for Statutory Protection	193
6.6.2 The Need for Extending the Scope of Statutory Protection	194

6.7	Need for the Individual Responsibility	195
6.7.1	Generally	195
6.7.2	Self-regulation	196
6.7.3	Evaluation	198
6.8	Consideration of the Reform Draft	198
6.9	The Recommended Legislative Scheme	199
	References	202
7	Conclusion: Chinese Privacy in the Twenty-First Century	205
7.1	Introduction	205
7.2	The Significance of the Privacy Balance	205
7.3	Other Possible Developments in China	206
7.3.1	Development of New Technology	206
7.3.2	Society Education	207
7.3.3	Trans-border Flows of Personal Information	207
7.4	Conclusion	208
	References	209

Protecting Privacy in China

A Research on China's Privacy Standards and the Possibility of Establishing the Right to Privacy and the Information Privacy Protection Legislation in Modern China

Wang, H.

2011, XI, 209 p., Hardcover

ISBN: 978-3-642-21749-4