

Contents

Part I Medical Education—A Democratising Force for Medicine .....	1
1 Medical Education as Patient .....	3
Not Prophecy, but Spotting Trends .....	3
Medical Education in an Historical Key .....	6
Identity .....	7
Location .....	7
Crossroads and Crisis: How Is the Patient? .....	8
The Symptom May Be the ‘Education’ in Medical Education, While the Cure May Be a New Approach to Education .....	10
Designing Learning for Work .....	14
Collaborative Learning at Work .....	14
Communication at Work .....	15
Democracy at Work .....	15
The Work of Identity .....	16
Reflexivity at Work .....	17
2 Beyond Practical Reasoning .....	19
From Critical Thinking to Practical Reasoning: A Necessary but Not Sufficient Change in Medical Education .....	19
A New Wave of Medical Education Thinking .....	26
‘Good Enough’ is Not Good Enough .....	29
3 Learning from Learning Theory .....	33
To the Things Themselves .....	33
Where’s the Sense in Medical Education?—Re-Visiting Practical Knowing .....	37
4 Socio-Cultural Learning Theories .....	43
Learning from History .....	43
Three Approaches to Learning .....	44

Miller Lite? .....	47
Contrasting Metaphors for Learning .....	50
Activity Theory .....	52
Cognitive Apprenticeship and Distributed Cognition .....	55
Dynamicist Learning and Complexity .....	55
Systems Thinking and Learning .....	57
Conclusions .....	60
Part II Identity, Power and Location in Medical Education .....	61
5 Producing Doctors .....	63
What is 'Identity?' .....	63
From the Identity of 'Medical Student' to the Identity of 'Doctor': Can Learning Theory Illuminate This Transition? .....	66
Actor-Network Theory (ANT) .....	68
Communities of Practice (COP) .....	70
Participation vs. Reification .....	72
Participation vs. Non-Participation .....	73
Modes of Belonging .....	73
Cultural-Historical Activity Theory (CHAT) .....	75
6 New Forms of Identity in a Runaway World of Medicine .....	81
Can the Center Hold? .....	81
The Doctor as Diagnostician, Symptomatologist and Connoisseur .....	82
The Doctor at Work in the Twenty-First Century: Emergence of New Identities Such as the 'Medical Citizen' .....	86
Two Sample Identities in Transition: Doctor as Diagnostician and Doctor as Teacher .....	90
7 The Medical Educator and the Clinical Teacher .....	93
Unpicking the Threads .....	93
A Framework for Discussing the Identity of the Medical Educator .....	95
Identities in Crisis and Transformation .....	96
Using Social Learning Theory Frameworks to Identify the Medical Educator and Clinical Teacher .....	98
8 Identity Construction of the Medical Educator Through     Learning and Writing .....	107
Introduction .....	107
Identity Defined by Philosophy of Teaching and Learning: Student-Centeredness and Democracy in the Classroom and Clinic .....	109
Empathy and the 'Prospero Effect' .....	111
Medical Education's Conservatism .....	112
The 'Constituent Principle' .....	113
A Literary Perspective on Identities of the Medical Educator .....	114

9	Power in Medical Education	119
	Bodies of Power	119
	Sovereign, Capillary, Virtue and Virtual Power	124
	Sovereign Power	124
	Capillary Power	127
	Virtue Power	130
	Virtual Power	133
10	Place Matters: Location in Medical Education	135
	Introduction	135
	Where Are We in Medical Education?	136
	Hospital Architectures and Cognitive Architectures	141
	The Platform	144
	The White Cube	145
	Work-Based Learning: Vocation as Location and Deterritorialization	147
11	Learning by Simulation and the Simulation of Learning	153
	An Age of Simulation	153
	Theory of Simulation: Classical to Postmodern	156
	Strengths and Weaknesses of Learning by Simulation	158
	Bodies and Nobodies	158
	Assessment	159
	Theory	159
	The Simulation Project: Will a Dialogue Emerge Between
	Simulation and Work-Based Learning?	162
	The Project of Simulation	162
	Simulation of Learning for Interpersonal Communication	166
12	Global Medical Education—A Post-Colonial Dilemma	171
	Imperialism by the Back Door?	171
	Comparative Education	174
	Is Western Medical Education Infectious?	175
	Flaws in the Global Medical Education Vision	178
	Global, Local or ‘Glocal’? The Trade in Knowledge
	as a Commodity	179
	From Reinforcing the Colonial Legacy to Challenging
	the Colonial Gaze	182
	Empire and Forms of Resistance	183
Part III	Medical Education Research—A Democratising Force for Medical Education	185
13	Let’s Get Real: Medical Students Learning from, with and About Patients	187
	Productive Forms of the Medical Encounter	187
	Towards an Authentic Patient-Centered Medical Education	188

Medical Students Learning from Patients, Supported by Clinical Teachers: A New Vintage .....	191
Patient, Medical Student and Doctor Exchanges in Medical Education .....	197
14 Texts, Authoring and Reading in Medical Education .....	201
The Patient as Text .....	201
Kinds of Text in Reading Patients: A Summary Model .....	208
Text Is Not an Answer, but a Question .....	209
Problem-Based Learning or Patient-Based Learning? .....	210
Evidence for the Value of a Triadic Model .....	211
15 Lack, Trajectories and Ruptures in Medical Education Research .....	215
Medical Education Research at a Crossroads .....	215
Origins of Medical Education Research .....	218
A Five-Point Agenda for Improving Medical Education Research .....	222
16 A Framework for Medical Education Research: Cultures, Contexts and Concepts .....	227
Identity, Power and Location Revisited .....	228
Landscapes of Research: Cultures, Contexts and Concepts .....	229
Cultures .....	229
Contexts .....	232
Concepts .....	237
Landscape .....	238
Part IV A Medical Education for the Future .....	241
17 Identities, Powers and Locations: What Does the Future Hold for Medical Education? .....	243
A Focus on Pedagogy .....	243
Crisis and Crossroads Redux and Some Notes on Method .....	244
The More Things Change, the More They Remain the Same .....	246
18 From Pedagogy to Policy: A Regulatory Framework for Medical Education .....	253
Developing a Creative Dialogue Between Pedagogy and Policy .....	253
Putting Patients at the Center of Policy .....	255
Academies Provide the Locations for Dialogue Between Pedagogy and Policy .....	256
Policy as Text .....	257
Coda .....	262
References .....	265
Author Index .....	283
Subject Index .....	287

Medical Education for the Future

Identity, Power and Location

Bleakley, A.; Bligh, J.; Browne, J.

2011, XVI, 292 p., Hardcover

ISBN: 978-90-481-9691-3