

Acknowledgements

The present treatise is an updated version of the thesis which was accepted by the Faculty of Law of the Humboldt University of Berlin in March 2009 in partial fulfilment of the requirements for the degree of Dr. iur. The research for the treatise was started while I was working as a research fellow at the Göttingen Institute of International and European Law. The topic of “targeted killings” was chosen as the outcome of one of many fruitful discussions with Prof. Dr. Georg Nolte, then director of the said institute. The main research – as well as the update to December 2010 – was done there.

I would like to express my sincere appreciation to all those who have directly or indirectly contributed to this thesis.

I would like to thank my “Doktorvater” Prof. Dr. Georg Nolte for his academic supervision, professional guidance and personal support and for reviewing the thesis in very short time. I would also like to thank Prof. Dr. Dr. h.c. Christian Tomuschat for quickly reviewing the thesis as the secondary referee.

I would like to thank Prof. Dr. Dr. h.c. Rüdiger Wolfrum and Prof. Dr. Armin von Bogdandy, editors of the series “Beiträge zum ausländischen öffentlichen Recht und Völkerrecht” of the Max Planck Institute for Comparative Public Law and International Law, for accepting the publication of the treatise in the series.

I would like to thank the whole staff – scientific and non-scientific – of the Göttingen Institute of International and European Law for (not only) providing the best conditions for research.

I would like to thank Meghan Gray and Dr. Michael Stuart (Jim) Bolton for proofreading an earlier version of the text.

I would like to thank my parents for rendering possible the education I enjoyed. Finally, I would like to thank my wife Kerstin for continuously and patiently supporting me in every phase of the work on this treatise. I dedicate the treatise to her.

Göttingen, December 2010
