

Contents

1	Some Relevant Concepts	1
1.1	Introduction	1
1.2	Formal and Informal Education	1
1.3	Acquisition and Participation	5
1.4	Socialisation and Enculturation	7
1.5	On Reflection	10
1.6	Metacognition	12
1.7	Learning to Talk, Learning to Think: The Dialogical Nature of Socio-Cultural Located Argumentation	16
1.8	Conclusion	18
	References	18
2	Sociological Perspectives on Medical Education	21
2.1	Introduction	21
2.2	The Social Theory of Pierre Bourdieu	22
2.2.1	Practice, Field, Habitus	23
2.3	Critical Sociologies of Medical Education	26
2.3.1	Medical Education Research	26
2.3.2	Bourdieuian Studies in Medical Education	28
2.3.3	Developing the Medical Habitus	28
2.4	The Cognitive (Medical) Habitus Needs (Ethical) Thinking Dispositions	31
2.4.1	The Disposition to Be Broad and Adventurous	34
2.4.2	The Disposition Toward Sustained Intellectual Curiosity	34
2.4.3	The Disposition to Clarify and Seek Understanding	34
2.4.4	The Disposition to Be Planful and Strategic	35
2.4.5	The Disposition to Be Intellectually Careful	35
2.4.6	The Disposition to Seek and Evaluate Reasons	36
2.4.7	The Disposition to Be Metacognitive	36
2.5	Conclusion	36
	References	37

3	Medical Ethics as an Aspect of Medical Education: A UK Perspective	41
3.1	Introduction: The Rise of Modern Medical Ethics in the UK . . .	41
3.2	1993s Tomorrow's Doctors in Context.	46
3.3	UK Medical Ethics Education Pre-Tomorrow's Doctors.	51
3.4	UK Medical Ethics Education Post-Tomorrow's Doctors	53
3.5	Conclusion	55
	References	57
4	Prof. W. G. Irwin: A Case Study in the Development of Medical Ethics Education in the UK.	59
4.1	Introduction	59
4.2	Prof. W. G. Irwin's Development of Academic General Practice	60
4.3	Teaching Terminal Care: A First Foray into the Ethics Of Medicine	63
4.4	Prof. W. G. Irwin and the Warnock Committee	65
4.5	The Development of Medical Ethics Education by Prof. W. G. Irwin and Colleagues.	66
4.6	Conclusion	69
	References	70
5	Medical Ethics Education from a Socio-Cultural Perspective. . . .	73
5.1	Introduction	73
5.2	Thinking as Practice: A Socio-Cultural Perspective on Medical Ethics Education	74
5.3	A Vygotskian Perspective.	79
5.4	Re-Thinking Apprenticeship: Rethinking Medical Ethics Education	84
5.5	What is Enculturated by Medical Ethics Education Considered as a Cognitive Apprenticeship?	88
5.5.1	Enculturating Concepts	89
5.5.2	Enculturating Medical Ethical Metacognition	89
5.5.3	Enculturating Beliefs.	90
5.5.4	Enculturating Thinking Dispositions	91
5.6	Conclusion	92
	References	93
6	Conclusions	97
6.1	Introduction	97
6.1.1	A Dispositional Thread	97
6.1.2	Beyond the New Synthesis in Moral Psychology	100
6.1.3	Professional Ethics as an Orthogonal Medical Specialism.	102

6.1.4 Implications for (Applied Philosophical) Bioethics 103

6.1.5 Implication for Medical Ethics Education 105

6.2 Conclusion 109

References 110

<http://www.springer.com/978-3-319-00484-6>

Medical Ethics Education: An Interdisciplinary and Social Theoretical Perspective

Emmerich, N.

2013, XVII, 111 p., Softcover

ISBN: 978-3-319-00484-6