

---

Contents

|                                                       |                                                                                                                               |            |
|-------------------------------------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|------------|
| 1                                              | Introduction . . . . .                                                                                                 | 1   |
|                                                       | Lidia Diappi                                                                                                                  |            |
| Part 1 Modeling the Spatial Behavior of Agents |                                                                                                                               |            |
| 2                                              | Employing Agents to Develop Integrated Urban Models: Numerical Results from Residential Mobility Experiments . . . . . | 19  |
|                                                       | Oswald Devisch, Theo Arentze, Aloys Borgers, and Harry Timmermans                                                             |            |
| 3                                              | Modeling Housing Market Dynamics Using a Multi-agent Simulation of Participants' Cognitive Behavior . . . . .          | 43  |
|                                                       | Maryam Esmaeili, Alberto Vancheri, and Paolo Giordano                                                                         |            |
| 4                                              | Redevelopments and Gentrification: A MAS Model of the Urban Housing Market in Milan . . . . .                          | 85  |
|                                                       | Lidia Diappi and Paola Bolchi                                                                                                 |            |
| Part 2 Empirical Investigations                |                                                                                                                               |            |
| 5                                              | Between Friends and Strangers: Schelling-Like Residential Dynamics in a Haredi Neighborhood in Jerusalem . . . . .     | 103 |
|                                                       | Shlomit Flint, Itzhak Benenson, Nurit Alfasi, and Yefim Bakman                                                                |            |
| 6                                              | Gentrification Without Exclusion? A SOM Neural Network Investigation on the Isola District in Milan . . . . .          | 127 |
|                                                       | Lidia Diappi, Paola Bolchi, and Luca Gaeta                                                                                    |            |
| 7                                              | Urban Policy and Gentrification. A Critical Analysis Using the Case of Paris . . . . .                                 | 151 |
|                                                       | Anne Clerval and Antoine Fleury                                                                                               |            |
| 8                                              | Conclusions . . . . .                                                                                                  | 171 |
|                                                       | Lidia Diappi                                                                                                                  |            |

<http://www.springer.com/978-3-7908-2863-4>

Emergent Phenomena in Housing Markets
Gentrification, Housing Search, Polarization

Diappi, L. (Ed.)

2013, XIV, 186 p., Hardcover

ISBN: 978-3-7908-2863-4

A product of Physica-Verlag Heidelberg