

Contents

1	Introduction	1
	References	13
2	Nancy Cartwright, Capacities and Nomological Machines: The Role of Theoretical Reason in Science	15
2.1	Introduction	15
2.2	The Cartwright–Aristotle Connection	20
2.2.1	The Connection	20
2.2.2	The Ontology of Capacities	22
2.2.3	The Epistemology of Capacities	25
2.3	Cartwright’s Skepticism About Capacities in the Social Realm	26
2.3.1	Cartwright’s Skepticism	26
2.3.2	Julian Reiss’s Interpretation and Proposal	29
2.4	Socio-Economic Machines	30
2.5	Conclusion	34
	References	35
3	Sen’s Capability Approach: The Role of Practical Reason in Social Science	39
3.1	Introducing the Capability Approach	41
3.2	Some Problems in Sen’s CA	46
3.2.1	Identification of Valuable Capabilities: The Debate Over Lists of Capabilities	47
3.2.2	Heterogeneity and Incommensurability	50
	References	52
4	The Contributions of Aristotle’s Thought to the Capability Approach	55
4.1	Aristotle on Lists	56
4.1.1	The Supposedly Aristotelian List	57
4.1.2	The True Aristotelian List	59
4.1.3	Back to Sen	63

4.2	“Practical Comparability” as a Way of Overcoming Incommensurability	64
4.2.1	The Aristotelian Conception.	64
4.2.2	Back to Sen.	68
4.3	Some Conclusions Regarding the Aristotelian Contribution to the CA.	70
4.4	Capabilities and Capacities	71
4.5	Conclusion	76
	References	77
5	Socio-Economic Machines and Practical Models of Development: The Role of the HDI	81
5.1	Socio-Economic Machines.	82
5.2	The HDI	86
5.3	Some Problems with Index Numbers and the HDI	88
5.4	Theoretical and Practical Reason in the HDI.	92
5.5	Conclusion: The Role of the HDI for the Construction of a Normative Socio-Economic Machine of Human Development.	97
	References	102
6	Conclusion: Theoretical and Practical Reason in Economics.	105
	Reference.	109

<http://www.springer.com/978-94-007-5563-5>

Theoretical and Practical Reason in Economics
Capacities and Capabilities

Crespo, R.F.

2013, IX, 109 p., Softcover

ISBN: 978-94-007-5563-5