

Contents

|                                                                                                                                     |     |
|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| 1 Strategy: What It Is .....                                                                                                 | 1   |
| Charles C. Okigbo                                                                                                                   |     |
| 2 Strategic Communication Campaigns .....                                                                                    | 11  |
| Elizabeth Crisp Crawford and Charles C. Okigbo                                                                                      |     |
| 3 Urbanization, Population, and Health Myths: AddressingCommon Misconceptions with Strategic Health Communication ..... | 25  |
| Kristine Berzins, Holly Greb, Malea Hoepf Young and Karen Hardee                                                                    |     |
| 4 “Soaps” for Social and Behavioral Change .....                                                                             | 37  |
| Kriss Barker                                                                                                                        |     |
| 5 Strategic Health Communication in Urban Settings:A Template for Training Modules .....                                | 53  |
| Renata Schiavo                                                                                                                      |     |
| 6 Risk, Crisis, and Emergency Communication in DevelopingCountries: Identifying the Needs of Urban Populations .....    | 65  |
| Kenneth A. Lachlan, Patric R. Spence and Christine A. Eith                                                                          |     |
| 7 Strategic Health Communication for Cancer Prevention .....                                                                 | 77  |
| Jennifer J. Edwards, Chuka Onwumechili and Carol A. Stroman                                                                         |     |
| 8 Strategic Health Communication .....                                                                                       | 89  |
| Kiran Prasad                                                                                                                        |     |
| 9 Integrating HIV/FP Programs: Opportunities for StrategicCommunication .....                                           | 103 |
| Susan Adamchak, Jennifer Reiersen and Jennifer Liku                                                                                 |     |

|           |                                                                                                                       |     |
|-----------|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| 10 | Communicating for Action: Tackling Health Inequity in Urban Areas .....                                        | 115 |
|           | Amit Prasad, Francisco Armada, Yumi Kimura,Yagaantsetseg Radnaabazar and Khongorzul Byambajav                     |     |
| 11 | Beyond Thinking and Planning Strategically to Improve Urban Residents' Health .....                            | 131 |
|           | Cornelius B. Pratt                                                                                                    |     |
| 12 | Health Communication Strategies for Sustainable Development in a Globalized World .....                        | 143 |
|           | Patchanee Malikhao and Jan Servaes                                                                                    |     |
| 13 | Urbanization and Strategic Health Communication in India .....                                                 | 159 |
|           | Margaret U. D'Silva, Vinita Agarwal, Steve Sohn and Vijay Sharma                                                      |     |
| 14 | Urban Health Communication Strategy of Pro-Poor Growth for Sustained Improvement in Health in South Asia ..... | 173 |
|           | Rukhsana Ahmed, Momtaz Uddin Ahmed and Zahirul Hasan Khan                                                             |     |
| 15 | The Role of Sports in Strategic Health Promotion .....                                                         | 187 |
|           | Priscilla Wamucii                                                                                                     |     |
| 16 | The Internet as a Sex Education Tool: A Case Study of an Online Thai Discussion Board .....                    | 199 |
|           | Thanomwong Poorisat and Arul Chib                                                                                     |     |
| 17 | Advertising and Childhood Obesity in China .....                                                               | 211 |
|           | Angela Chang                                                                                                          |     |
|           | Index .....                                                                                                    | 221 |

<http://www.springer.com/978-1-4614-9334-1>

Strategic Urban Health Communication

Okigbo, C. (Ed.)

2014, XVII, 225 p. 11 illus., Hardcover

ISBN: 978-1-4614-9334-1