1	Introduction	1
1.1	A Puzzle About Reduction	3
1.2	A Sketch of a Solution	3
1.3	A Note on Methodology	4
1.4	Reduction and Reductionism	5
1.5	The Book's Structure	6
	Bibliography	8
 Part I The Concept of Reduction – An Explication
2	How to Approach Reduction: Explication and Meta-science	11
2.1	Reduction, Elimination, and Monism – A Taxonomy	11
2.1.1	Reductionism and Monism	12
2.1.2	Two Forms of Eliminativism	12
2.1.3	Four Types of Monism – The Taxonomy	13
2.1.4	Reduction and Metaphysical Neutrality	16
2.1.5	Reductionism and Realism	17
2.1.6	Two Philosophical Challenges: Reduction and Replacement	18
2.1.7	Theory Reduction and Ontological Reduction	19
2.2	Ways of Defining Reduction	20
2.2.1	Definitions as Stipulations	21
2.2.2	Empirically Inspired Definitions	22
2.2.3	Definitions as Explications	24
2.3	The Concept of Reduction as the Subject of Explication?	29
2.4	Terminology	31
2.5	Conclusion	35
	Bibliography	35
3	The Puzzle of Reduction	39
3.1	The Puzzle	40
3.2	Hyper-intensionality	41

3.3	Hyper-intensional Predicates: Counting Arguments vs. Counting Relata	43
3.3.1	An Objection	47
3.4	A Solution to the Puzzle	49
3.5	Conclusion	50
	Bibliography	51
4	Reductive Explanation and Mechanistic Explanation	53
4.1	Reduction – A First Explication	53
4.2	Reductive ‘By’-Explanations	55
4.3	Mechanistic Explanation – The Background	56
4.3.1	The Ontological Characterization of Mechanistic Explanation	58
4.3.2	The Grammatical Characterization of Mechanistic Explanation	63
4.4	Identity in Mechanistic Explanation	65
4.4.1	Kim’s Worry	67
4.4.2	Kim’s Mistake	68
4.4.3	Identity	69
4.5	Mechanistic and Reductive Explanation	72
4.5.1	Teleology	72
4.5.2	Grammar	73
4.6	Conclusion	78
	Bibliography	79
5	Reductive Explanation	83
5.1	The Model: An Intuitive Outline	84
5.1.1	Property Structures and Semantics	85
5.1.2	Treating ‘Because’ as Basic	87
5.2	Meaning-Revealing Definitions and Property-Structures	88
5.2.1	Arriving at the Meaning of Expressions	89
5.2.2	An Ideal Demand: Maximal Explicitness of a Definition ...	90
5.3	Property Structure Terms	92
5.3.1	Building Constituents of Property Structure Terms	93
5.3.2	The Role of Connectives and Quantifiers	94
5.3.3	An Operator for Designating Property Structures	96
5.4	The Metaphysics and the Functioning of Property Structures	97
5.4.1	Basic and Complex Constituents	98
5.4.2	Determination of Objects	98
5.4.3	Satisfying Property Structures	99
5.4.4	Constitutive Structures	100
5.5	Constitutive Property Structures and Mereology	102
5.6	An Explication of Reduction	103
5.6.1	The Core Notion	104

5.6.2	Derivative Notions of Reduction: Partial Reduction, Plural Reduction, and Generic Reduction-Statements	108
5.7	Rival Explications	112
5.7.1	Reduction Within a 2-D Framework	112
5.7.2	Reduction Within Pragmatic and Cognitive Frameworks ...	115
5.7.3	Reductive Dependence as Grounding Epistemic and Pragmatic Differences	116
5.8	Conclusion	118
	Appendix: A Semi-formal Treatment of Property Structure Terms	119
	A Set of Rules for Obtaining Schemata for Property Structure Terms	119
	Semantic characterizations of Instances of S_{ps} Schemata	121
	An Example	123
	Bibliography	124

Part II The Explication at Work

6	Reduction in the Philosophy of Mind	129
6.1	Background	129
6.2	Type-Identity Theory	130
6.3	Type-Identity Theory and Conceptual Diversity	132
6.4	Token Identity Theory	134
6.5	Type-Identity Theory Strikes Back	137
6.5.1	Contextualized Kinds	139
6.5.2	Disjunctive Properties	140
6.5.3	Alternatives to Identity	142
6.6	An Intermediate Conclusion: Identity -Theories	143
6.7	Functional Reduction	144
6.8	Conclusion	148
	Bibliography	149
7	Conceptions of Reduction in the Philosophy of Science	153
7.1	Identity Based Theory Reduction	153
7.2	Nagel's Model	157
7.3	Structuralism	162
7.4	Schaffner's Reduction-Replacement Model	166
7.4.1	A Sketch of the Schaffner Model	166
7.4.2	The Role of Reduction and Identity in the Schaffner Model	171
7.5	New Wave Reductionism	173
7.6	Theory Reduction	178
7.7	Conclusion	180
	Bibliography	181

8	Theory Reduction and Holism	185
8.1	A Sketch of the Alternative	185
8.2	Directionality and the Reductive Link	187
8.3	Directionality and Differences Between Theories	189
8.4	Two Problems for Holistic Approaches to Theory-Reduction	191
8.5	Holism and the Problem of Equivalent Theories	192
8.6	Holism and the Problem of “Ontological” Reductions	194
8.7	The Priority of the Explication and the Failure of Holism	196
8.7.1	Reduction and Explanation in Terms of Parts	197
8.7.2	Reduction and a Theory’s Range of Application	198
8.7.3	Reduction and the Scope of the Reduced Theory	199
8.8	Conclusion	200
	Bibliography	201
9	Reduction Beyond the Reduction Debate	203
9.1	Reduction, Scientific Levels, and Physicalism	203
9.1.1	Physicalism	204
9.1.2	Scientific Levels	205
9.2	Reduction and Unification	209
9.2.1	Reduction and Ontological Unification	210
9.2.2	Reduction and Epistemological Unification	210
9.2.3	Reduction and Explanatory Unification	211
9.3	Reduction and Grounding	214
9.3.1	Reduction as Grounding – The First Argument	216
9.3.2	Reduction as Grounding – The Second Argument	217
9.4	Reduction and Intervention	220
9.5	Conclusion	222
	Bibliography	223
10	The Reductionist’s Commitment	225
