

Contents

Part I Introduction

- 1 Introduction: Decision-Making, Global Negotiations and Climate Change: The Making of a Decision Framework 3

Part II The Climate Change Negotiations: The Value of Context and Modeled Experience

- 2 Contextualization of Multilateral Climate Change Negotiations: Understanding the Meaning of Path Dependency for Decision-Making 15
- 3 Negotiation Re-visited: Understanding Decision-making 37
- 4 Simulation as Method of Research: Learning from Experiences of the COP15 Games 49
- 5 Complexities in Global Climate Talks: Stumbling Blocks to Decision Making 81

Part III Understanding the Conflictual Relations in the Global Climate Talks

- 6 The Entanglement of Global Climate Talks in North-South Relations: Identity Politics in the Trajectories of Relations 115
- 7 Rethinking Paradigms in Global Climate Talks: Conceptualizing Equitable Access to Sustainable Development (EASD) 135

Part IV Strategic Facilitation of Global Climate Negotiations: Opportunities and Intervention

8 Strategic Facilitation of the Climate Decision Making Process: Leadership and Coordination as Basis for Long-Term Cooperation	157
9 Managing the Bargaining Table Through Flexibility Mechanisms: The Benefits of Coalitions and Sequencing	177

Part V Conclusion

10 Conclusion: Decision-Making, Global Negotiations and Climate Change—Lessons for Theory and for Practice	195
Annex 1: Impressions from the Simulation Games	207
Annex 2: COP 15 Simulation Game General Description	217
Annex 3: Confidential Profile—Denmark	223
Annex 4: Confidential Profile—Sweden	227
Annex 5: Confidential Profile—United States of America	231
Annex 6: Confidential Profile—India	235
Annex 7: Confidential Profile—China	239
References	243

Strategic Facilitation of Complex Decision-Making
How Process and Context Matter in Global Climate Change Negotiations

Hernández, A.M.

2014, XVII, 266 p. 39 illus., 1 illus. in color., Hardcover

ISBN: 978-3-319-06196-2