

Contents

1	High Uncertainty of Companies' Operations Versus Value Creation in VBM Systems	1
1.1	Perturbations on Financial Markets: The Age of Uncertainty	1
1.2	Return to a Strategic Approach to Value Based Management: Value in Volatile Environment	13
1.2.1	Uncertainty Versus Strategy	13
1.2.2	Selected Dysfunctions in the Measurement of Effectiveness and Value of Enterprises	25
1.2.3	"MBA Oath"?	29
	References	31
2	Expectations in the Theory of Economics	35
2.1	The Origin of the Economic Theory of Expectations	35
2.2	Rational Expectations Hypothesis and Its Criticism	37
2.3	The Psychological Factor in the Study of Expectations	40
	References	45
3	Investors' Expectations	47
3.1	Behavioural Models of Capital Markets Versus Investors' Expectations	47
3.2	Understanding Investors' Expectations: Signals and Noise Versus Expectations	50
3.3	Do Investors' Expectations Really Matter?	54
3.4	Investors' Motivational and Cognitive Inclinations Versus Expectations	59
3.5	Investors' Psychological Biases Versus the 2007–2009 Financial Crisis	66
3.5.1	Investors' and Managers' Greed	67
3.5.2	Underestimated Risk	68
3.5.3	Investors and Crowd Behaviour	69
3.5.4	Mistakes Made by Rating Agencies	70
	References	72

4	Creation of Investors' Expectations: The Role of Investor Relations and Company Information Policy	75
4.1	Technical and Fundamental Analysis Versus the Creation of Investors' Expectations	75
4.2	The History of Regulating Information Base on Stock Exchanges as a Reaction to Crises	79
4.3	Corporate Governance Crisis 2001–2009 What's Next?	89
4.4	Investor's Information Expectations	91
4.5	Gaps in the Communication System Between Companies and the Investor Community	96
4.6	New Approach to Investor Relations	100
4.6.1	Challenges of the Present Times	100
4.6.2	Increasing Disclosure as a Condition of Successful IR	105
4.6.3	Fear of Increased Disclosure: Fact or Myth?	111
4.6.4	Benefits Resulting from Increasing a Company's Openness with Information	115
4.6.5	Investor Relations Versus Risk	116
	References	119
5	Including Investors' Expectations in the Concept of Value Based Management	123
5.1	Expectations-Based Management: EBM™	123
5.2	Results Measurement System: Taking Investors' Expectations into Account	124
5.2.1	Surplus Residual Income	124
5.2.2	Excess Change in EVA	127
5.2.3	Excess Market Value Added for Shareholders	130
5.2.4	Creating Shareholder Value in the Long Term	133
5.3	Strategic implications of investors' expectations	135
5.4	Advantages and Drawbacks of Expectations Management	145
	References	146
6	Information Asymmetry and the Problem of Informational Efficiency on Capital Markets	147
6.1	Information Asymmetry	147
6.2	Information Efficiency on the Capital Market	151
6.3	The Influence of Selected Information on a Company's Valuation on the Capital Market	158
6.3.1	The Influence of Announced Results Forecasts and Faulty Forecasts	158
6.3.2	Informative Content of analysts' Opinions	160
6.3.3	Changes in Top Management Versus Stock Prices	161
6.3.4	Dividend Policy	161
	References	172

7	Information Asymmetry Versus Investors' Expectations and Creating Shareholder Value in Companies Listed on the Warsaw Stock Exchange	177
7.1	Research Model	177
7.1.1	Research Assumptions	177
7.1.2	The Variables of the Information Asymmetry Level and Their Operationalisation	178
7.2	Correlation Between Information Asymmetry in Investor Relations and Asymmetry Gauges	190
7.3	Information Asymmetry and Shareholders' Expectations	198
7.3.1	Operationalisation of Variables Representing Investors' Expectations and Creating Shareholder Value That Meets These Expectations	198
7.3.2	Correlations Between the Level of Information Asymmetry in Investor relations, Investors' Expectations and Firms' Results	206
7.4	Conclusions	215
	References	216
8	Conclusions	219

Investor Expectations in Value Based Management
Translated by Klementyna Dec and Weronika Mincer
Mikołajek-Gocejna, M.
2014, XVII, 220 p. 47 illus., Hardcover
ISBN: 978-3-319-06846-6