

Contents

1	Philosophy, Epistemology, and Cartography	1
1.1	Introduction	1
1.2	Philosophy and Epistemology: Some Scopes	1
1.3	Cartography and Knowledge of the World: Philosophical and Epistemological Implications	2
1.4	Different ‘Isms’ and Their Repercussions in Cartography and Mapping	4
1.4.1	Positivism and Empiricism	4
1.4.2	Logical Positivism or Neo-Positivism	7
1.4.3	Geography and Cartography in View of Logical Positivism	9
1.5	Postmodernism and Poststructuralism	12
1.5.1	Postmodernism and Cartography	15
1.5.2	Mental Map Generation Through Map Reading: Against Ubiquitous Geoinformation	17
2	A Philosophical Framework Applied to Cartography	19
2.1	Introduction	19
2.2	Immanuel Kant	19
2.2.1	No Epistemology Without him: Kant’s Role for Spatial Sciences	19
2.2.2	Kant’s Philosophy: An Epistemological Frame for Geography and Cartography	20
2.3	Ludwig Wittgenstein	21
2.3.1	Wittgenstein’s Early Work “ Tractatus logico-philosophicus ”	21
2.3.2	Wittgenstein’s Late Work “ Philosophical Investigations ”	24
2.4	Karl Popper	27
2.4.1	Popper’s Three Worlds Theory and Cartography	28
2.4.2	Three-Worlds Model of Popper and Multisensory Cartography	31

3	Paradigms in the History of Science	33
3.1	Introduction	33
3.2	Kuhn's Paradigm Shift	33
3.3	Paradigms in Geography	39
4	Tendencies in Contemporary Cartography	41
4.1	Introduction	41
4.2	Traditional and Modern Components in Theoretical Cartography	42
4.2.1	Cartographic Language, Modelling, and Communication	42
4.2.2	Geo-Spatial Data Manipulation, Processing and Visualisation	43
4.3	Cartographic Research Paradigm and Research Focus	44
4.3.1	Map: Image, Model, Social Construction	45
4.4	Paradigms in Cartography: Cartographic Research and the Internet	46
4.4.1	Cartographic Communication Model	47
4.4.2	Analytical Cartography	48
4.4.3	Maps and the Internet	49
4.4.4	Trust in Map Information	49
4.5	Cartographic Representation and Visualisation	50
4.6	Cybercartography Paradigm	54
4.7	Paradigm Changes in Cartography	56
4.8	Cartographic Trends and Paradigms Since 1950	58
4.9	Further Tendencies	60
4.9.1	VR Cartography	60
4.9.2	KIS: Cartographic Information System—a (Short) Episode (?)	60
4.9.3	Cartography and Visualistics	61
4.9.4	“Living Cartography”: Technology-Driven Versus Design-Driven Cartography	64
5	Critical Cartography in the Context of Post-Modernism	65
5.1	Introduction	65
5.2	Humanities and Cartography	65
5.3	Towards a Postmodern Cartography	66
5.4	Critical Cartography	67
5.4.1	Critical Cartography and its New Practices	69
5.5	Cartography as Social Construction	72
5.5.1	Deconstruction and Cartographic Text	74
5.5.2	Power and Maps	77
5.6	Neo-Cartography: A Concretion Towards the Map as Social Construction	80

5.7	Mapping vs Cartography	82
5.8	Personal GIS.	85
5.9	Geocomposition.	86
6	Post-representational Cartography	87
6.1	Introduction	87
6.2	What is Post-representational Cartography?	87
6.3	Transition Towards a Post-representational Cartography.	88
6.3.1	Maps as Historical Products: Horizon of Possibilities	89
6.3.2	Maps as Locus of Semiosis: Self-Reference of the Map	90
6.3.3	Maps as Propositions: Perimap and Epimap	91
6.3.4	Maps as Immutable Mobiles: Stable Form of Knowledge.	93
6.3.5	Maps as Actants: Social Context of the Map	94
6.3.6	Mapping as Image Rhetorics	95
6.4	Foundations for a Post-representational Cartography	95
6.4.1	Maps as Inscriptions: Social Life Affected by Maps	96
6.4.2	Maps as Practices: a State of Becoming.	96
7	Possibilities of Paradigms in Cartography.	101
7.1	Introduction	101
7.2	Criteria of Contrast	101
7.3	Contrasting Paradigms in Geography: An Example	103
7.4	Comparing Tendencies in Cartography within the Epistemological Space	104
7.5	New and not so New Epistemological Crises in Cartography	110
7.6	Autostereoscopic True-3D Cartography: Another New Paradigm	113
8	Scopes of Paradigms in Cartography	115
8.1	Introduction	115
8.2	Paradigmatic Tendencies as in Other Sciences (Geography)	116
8.2.1	Proposed Paradigm Tendencies in Cartography.	116
8.2.2	Distinction Between Scientific-Empirical and Critical Approaches.	120
8.2.3	Transition from the Scientific Paradigm to the Critical Paradigm	121
8.2.4	Post-Representational Cartography: A Paradigmatic Proposal	124
8.3	Paradigms in Cartography: An Epistemological Review.	126
8.3.1	Returning to Kuhn	126
8.3.2	On the Scope of Cartographic Paradigms.	128

9	Conclusions	131
9.1	Insights	131
9.2	Achievements	132
9.3	Suggested Advancements	133
	References	135

Paradigms in Cartography

An Epistemological Review of the 20th and 21st
Centuries

Azócar Fernández, P.I.; Buchroithner, M.

2014, XVII, 150 p., Hardcover

ISBN: 978-3-642-38892-7