Contents

1 Introduction 1

2 Demographic Change as a Challenge 7
2.1 Current Demographic Structure in Germany and Poland 9
2.2 Determinants of Lower Fertility Rates 11
2.3 Determinants of Mortality Decline 15
2.4 Determinants of Migration Patterns 16
References 22

3 How Do Societies Cope with Complex Demographic Challenges? A Model 25
3.1 A Short Review 26
3.2 Demographic Ways of Coping with Demographic Change 30
3.3 Non-demographic Ways of Coping with Demographic Change 32
3.4 Short Summary 51
References 53

4 Data Sets and Methods Used 59
4.1 Methodologies for Studying Coping with Demographic Change 59
4.2 The Data Sets Created and Used 60
4.3 Approach to Data Analysis 64
References 65

5 Why do Municipalities 'Think' in Demographic Terms? Governing by Population Numbers in Germany and Poland 67
5.1 Introduction 67
5.2 Is Demographic Change Relevant to Public Sector Organisations? 69
5.3 In-kind Calculation of Municipal Services Based on Population Numbers 73

5.4 Demographic Responsiveness of Local Government Revenues in Germany and Poland 84
5.5 Conclusion 89
References 91

6 Coping with Demographic Decline in German and Polish Municipalities 95
6.1 Introduction 95
6.2 Comparing Municipal Framing and Coping Strategies 97
6.3 Growth Frames and the Expansion of Public Services 98
6.4 Demographisation Frames and Reduction Strategies 104
6.5 Realistic Frames 110
6.6 Denial Frames 112
6.7 Reorganisation of Public Services Through Privatisation 116
6.8 Second-Order Problems of Personnel Downsizing in Internal Labour Markets 119
6.9 Conclusion 124
References 126

7 Expansive Reaction to Demographic Change: The Case of the Polish Educational Sector 131
7.1 Inevitable Consequences of Demographic Change? 132
7.2 Forms of Expansion of the Polish Educational Sector at the Central and Local Government Level 135
7.3 Consequences of Expansion Strategies 144
7.4 Concluding Remarks 153
References 156

8 The Demographic Responsiveness of Education Demand and Supply at Different Levels of the Education System 161
8.1 Introduction 161
8.2 The Demographic Responsiveness of the Education System 163
8.3 Demographic Responsiveness of the Education System in Saxony-Anhalt 165
8.4 Equal Access to Education and Economisation of Infrastructure 183
References 186

9 Personnel Strategies of Public Sector Organisations in Response to a Declining Service Population. A Model and Empirical Evidence 191
9.1 Introduction 191
9.2 Theoretical Considerations 194
9.3 Personnel Policy in Polish Public Schools Facing Falling Enrolment 199

9.4 Discussion 216
References 218

10 Demographic Challenges and Mentalities: Modes of Reflexivity and Personnel Policy in German and Polish Municipalities 223
10.1 Introduction 223
10.2 Conceptual Considerations 224
10.3 Applied Methodology 230
10.4 Empirical Results in a German-Polish Comparison 233
10.5 Conclusion 245
References 247

11 The Consequences of Coping with Demographic Change for Fiscal Capacity of and Unemployment in German Municipalities 251
11.1 Introduction: Does Local Population Policy Matter? 251
11.2 Theoretical Concept: The Model of Frame Selection (MFS) 254
11.3 Methodology 262
11.4 Empirical Results 269
11.5 Conclusion 275
References 276

http://www.springer.com/978-3-319-10300-6

Coping with Demographic Change: A Comparative View on Education and Local Government in Germany and Poland

Sackmann, R.; Bartl, W.; Jonda, B.; Kopycka, K.; Rademacher, C.

2015, VII, 281 p. 25 illus., 1 illus. in color., Hardcover
ISBN: 978-3-319-10300-6