

Contents

1	Introduction	1
1.1	The Russian Experience in the Rediscovery of Urban Agriculture	1
1.2	Family Urban Agriculture in Russia Faced with the Ignored Relationship Between Urban Housing and Nature	2
1.3	A Dialogic Perspective to Identify the Universal Character of the Russian Experience	14
1.4	Networking Practices	17
2	The Palimpsest of Urban Gardening in Russia	21
2.1	Current Situation	21
2.1.1	Large-Scale Multifunctional Gardening	21
2.1.2	Considerable Space for Allotment Gardens, Vegetable Gardens, and Dachas	26
2.2	Foundations	30
2.2.1	Words and Their Representations	30
2.2.2	Gardening, Science, and Social Transformation	34
2.3	1920s–1930s: The Allotment Garden Melting Pot	42
3	A New Civil Right Won Under the Soviet Regime	47
3.1	The Consequences of War and Famine	47
3.2	A planned Policy	65
3.3	Winning the Right to Use Plots of Land as Holiday Destinations	70
4	A Post-Soviet Phenomenon	75
4.1	The Crisis Period 1986–2000	75
4.2	Development and Transformation of Urban Gardening	77
4.2.1	A New Wave of Garden Creations	78
4.2.2	Privatisation: Towards a World of Small Landowners	79
4.2.3	Varying Trends	81
4.2.4	“Abandoned” Garden Plots	81

4.2.5	Development of Low-Density Housing: Cottages and Villages of Cottages.....	83
4.2.6	Future Changes	84
4.3	Consolidation of Allotment Gardens.....	92
4.3.1	A model Covering 10 Million Garden Plots	93
4.3.2	Improvements in the Plots of Land and Allotment Gardens...	94
4.3.3	Governance Changes	95
5	The Russian Urban Grower: Representations and Practices	99
5.1	The Urban Grower and His Garden	99
5.1.1	The ideal type of the Urban Grower of Russia.....	99
5.1.2	The Existential Relationship Between City-Dweller and Nature: Boris Pasternak	100
5.1.3	The Desire for a Peaceful Modern World	104
5.2	The Urban Grower and the Soil	109
5.2.1	The Influence of Dokuchaev and His Disciples.....	109
5.2.2	Pollution and its Representation.....	110
5.2.3	Cultivation Practices	112
5.3	A Crucial Issue: the Education of Children.....	117
5.3.1	Urban Children's Representations of Soil, Earth, and Their Relationship with Nature	117
5.3.2	Possible Strengthening of an Educational Policy on Soil and Gardening.....	120
6	In Favour of a New Perspective	123
6.1	Family Urban Agriculture as Part of the Wealth of Nations	124
6.1.1	The Therapeutic Effect: A "shock absorber" for Stress Caused by the Economic and Social Chaos of the 1990s	124
6.1.2	Contribution to the Food Supply.....	125
6.1.3	Improving the Environment	127
6.2	Integral Human Habitat as a Condition for Wellbeing.....	129
6.2.1	Individual and Social Development: By Cultivating Nature, Man Cultivates Himself	130
6.2.2	Restoring One's Strength	133
6.2.3	Harmonising Lifestyles	135
6.3	Family Urban Agriculture to Eradicate Poverty.....	136
7	A Continental Rhizome: Gardening Policies and Visions of Society	139
7.1	The Scandinavian and German Model	140
7.2	Post-Communist Countries	143
7.2.1	Countries of the Former Soviet Union	143
7.2.2	The Former Communist Countries of Central and Eastern Europe	145

7.3	Gardening, Socialism, and New Societies with Market Economy	150
7.3.1	Ideological Opposition of the 1940s and 1950s	151
7.3.2	Changing Policies of the 1950s and 1960s	151
7.3.3	The Transition to Other Kinds of Societies	154
8	Western and Southern Europe viewed from a Russian Perspective	159
8.1	Substantial Inequality in Access to Nature	161
8.1.1	Integral Human Habitat of Detached Houses and Second Homes	161
8.1.2	Apartments Disconnected from Land	162
8.2	The Microcosm of Family Allotment Gardens	164
8.2.1	An Uneven Level of Institutionalisation, a Small Place and a Limited Range of Functions	165
8.2.2	A Legacy of the Industrial Revolution: Potential Poverty Alleviation	169
8.2.3	An Unused Potential	175
8.3	Current Reorganisations	180
8.3.1	Migratory Movements and Population Changes in Allotment Gardens	181
8.3.2	New Allotment Gardens to Tackle Poverty, the Deterioration in Social Ties, Antisocial Behaviour, and Violence	182
8.3.3	Activists Inventing Thriftier, More Autonomous Lifestyles with Greater Solidarity	188
9	Universal Meaning	191
Appendix		197
Annex 1.	The Capitals: Moscou, Saint-Pétersbourg, Kazan	197
Annex 2.	The Collective Gardens “War Veterans”
Annex 3.	The Collective Gardens “No. 7 of the Aircraft Engine Manufacturing Company/KMPO Kazan”: massif Soukhaya rieka	200
Annex 4.	The Collective Gardens “Victoria Island”	201
Glossary		201
Land, Soil, Topsoil		201
Landholding and Ownership in Russia		202
Allotment Garden Buildings		203
General Summary		203
Summary of Each Chapter		204
Chapter 1. Introduction		204
Chapter 2. The Palimpsest of Urban Gardening in Russia		204
Chapter 3. A New Civil Right Won Under the Soviet Regime		205
Chapter 4. A Post-Soviet Phenomenon		205

Chapter 5. The Russian Urban Grower: Representations and Practices.....	206
Chapter 6. In Favour of a New Perspective	206
Chapter 7. A Continental Rhizome: Gardening Policies and Visions of Society.....	207
Chapter 8. Western and Southern Europe Viewed from a Russian Perspective.....	207
Chapter 9. Universal Meaning	208
Bibliography	209

Family Urban Agriculture in Russia

Lessons and Prospects

Boukharaeva, L.; Marloie, M.

2015, XVII, 215 p. 58 illus., 45 illus. in color., Hardcover

ISBN: 978-3-319-11613-6