

Contents

1	Introduction	1
	References	5
 Part I From the City State to the Roman Empire
2	From the Origins to the Polis	9
2.1	From Nomadic to Sedentary Society: The Neolithic Revolution	10
2.2	The First Literate Societies: Power and Social Structure in the Great Ancient Civilization of the Near East	11
2.2.1	The Civilizations of the Indus Valley	11
2.2.2	Egypt Under the Pharaohs	12
2.2.3	Power in Ancient Mesopotamia	13
2.2.4	Confucius and the Origin of the State in China	14
2.3	Family and Power in the West	16
2.3.1	The Indo-Europeans Lay the Linguistic and Social Foundations of Western Culture	16
2.3.2	Indo-European Family Structure and the Formation of Society in the West: From the Tribe to the City . . .	16
2.4	The Greek Polis as the First Precursor of the State in the West . . .	19
2.4.1	An Initial Stage of Monarchy: The Minoan and Mycenaean Civilizations	19
2.4.2	From the Homeric Kingdoms to the Appearance of the Polis (800–500 BC)	20
2.4.3	Synoeicism as the Basis of the Polis	21
2.4.4	The Consolidation of the Polis and Its Aristocratic Model: The Case of Sparta	22
2.4.5	The People Versus the Aristocrats: The Origin of the “Democratic” System	24
2.4.6	Athens’ Cleisthenes, History’s First “Democrat”	25
2.4.7	Pericles’ Athens	26

2.5	The Drawbacks of the Polis Model	26
2.5.1	The Division of Hellas	27
2.5.2	Attempts to Improve Upon the Polis Model	27
	References	33
3	The Roman Political Model: From Res Publica to Imperium	37
3.1	Rome and the Origins of the Western State	38
3.1.1	The Flaw of the Polis Model	38
3.1.2	The Roman Civitas : An Expanding Polis	39
3.2	The Indo-European Origins of Roman Society and the Structural Basis for the Roman Civitas	40
3.2.1	Gentilitates , Curiae and Tribus	41
3.2.2	The Popular Assemblies as the Basis of the Roman Republic	42
3.3	An Aristocratic Polis	43
3.3.1	The Leadership of the Roman Aristocracy	43
3.3.2	A Political Constitution Designed to Prevent Dictatorship	45
3.4	From Republic to Empire	47
3.4.1	An Extraordinary Territorial Expansion	47
3.4.2	From Conquest to Stable Dominion	47
3.4.3	The Consequences of Rome's Territorial Expansion: The Crisis of the Republican System	48
3.5	Augustus and the Singular Reestablishment of the Republican Regime	50
3.5.1	The First Citizen	50
3.5.2	From Diarchy to Monarchy: The Birth of the Roman Empire	52
3.6	The Era of the Dominate, or the Triumph of Imperial Absolutism	54
3.6.1	From Imperator to Dominus	54
3.6.2	The Disappearance of the Republican System	55
3.7	An Avant La Lettre State	56
3.8	Roman Citizenship: History's First "Nationality"?	57
	References	61
4	From Territorial Power to Spiritual Rule: Christianity's Political Dimension	65
4.1	Church and State in the Western Tradition	66
4.2	The Origins of Christianity	67
4.2.1	It All Started with Judaism	67
4.2.2	A Provincial Jew Named Jesus, Aka "Christ"	68
4.2.3	Had It Not Been for St. Paul	70
4.3	Christianity and the Roman Empire	72
4.3.1	A Threat to the Empire?	72
4.3.2	From Forbidden Cult to Official State Religion (380 AD)	73

4.3.3	The Origins of Catholicism	76
4.3.4	Emperors vs. Bishops: “Caesaropapism”	78
4.4	The Church as a Political Body	79
4.4.1	The Origin of the Ecclesiastical Profession: Bishops, Deacons and Presbyters	79
4.4.2	The Development of Church Organization: Parishes and Dioceses	80
4.4.3	Metropolitans and Patriarchs	81
4.4.4	The Councils as Collective Decision-Making Bodies	81
4.4.5	The Origins of the Papacy as a Moral Authority	82
	References	85

Part II The Origins of the European “Nations”

5	From the Germanic Tribes to Kingdoms	93
5.1	The Invasions	94
5.1.1	The First Germanic Wave: The Visigoths (Late Fourth Century)	94
5.1.2	The Second Wave: The Suebi, Vandals and Alani (Early Fifth Century)	96
5.1.3	The Third Wave: Franks, Burgundians, Alamanni, Angles and Saxons (Mid Fifth Century)	96
5.1.4	The Last Wave: The Lombards	97
5.2	The Germanic Kingdoms	97
5.2.1	Diversity Versus Unity	97
5.2.2	The Social and Political Transformation of the Germanic Peoples	98
5.2.3	Roman Monarchy vs. German Royalty	99
5.2.4	The Gradual Assimilation of the Roman Imperial Tradition	101
5.2.5	The Structural Weaknesses of the New Kingdoms: Patrimonial Possession, Inheritance and Protofeudalism	102
5.3	The Church and the Preservation of the Roman “State” Tradition	103
5.3.1	The Emergence of the Monastic Movement	103
5.3.2	St. Gregory the Great and the Consolidation of Papal Authority	104
5.3.3	Christianity and the New Germanic Peoples	105
5.3.4	The Church and the “Romanization” of the Germanic Kingdoms	106
5.4	The Origin of the European “Nations?”	108
	References	115

6	Popes vs. Emperors: The Rise and Fall of Papal Power	121
6.1	The Transformation of the Papacy: From Spiritual to Temporal Power	122
6.1.1	The Popes vs. the Byzantines and Lombards	122
6.1.2	The Alliance with the Frankish Monarchy and the Rise of the Papal States	123
6.2	Charlemagne and the Resurgence of the Imperial Idea in the West	126
6.2.1	Charlemagne and the End of the Lombardian Kingdom	126
6.2.2	The Appearance of the Kingdom of Italy	126
6.2.3	The Reappearance of the Imperial Idea in the West	127
6.3	From the Carolingian Empire to the Holy Roman Empire	129
6.3.1	The Frankish Monarchy Dissociates Itself from the Empire	129
6.3.2	The Germanic Revival of the Imperial Idea	130
6.4	The Era of “Papal Theocracy”, or the Peak of Ecclesiasticism	134
6.4.1	Ecclesiastical Decline During the Feudal Period	134
6.4.2	The Ecclesiastical Resurgence: The Eastern Schism, Cluny and the Gregorian Reform	136
6.4.3	The Papacy’s Power Swells	139
6.4.4	The Legal Consequences of the Papal Victory: The Secularization of Non-ecclesiastical Public Authorities	140
6.4.5	Papal Decline and the Fragmentation of Europe	140
6.5	The Survival of the Imperial Idea	142
	References	147
7	From Public to Private Power: Europe in the Feudal Age	153
7.1	The Origins of Feudalism	154
7.1.1	The Administrative Shortcomings of the Carolingian Monarchy	154
7.1.2	Vassaldom: A Formula for Permanent Control over Local Authorities	155
7.1.3	The Limits of the Feudal Relationship: Its Lifelong Character	157
7.1.4	The Consuetudinary and Judicial Regulation of Vassal Relations	157
7.2	The Consolidation of the Feudal System: The Era of “Classic Feudalism”	158
7.2.1	The Degradation of the System: From Lifelong to Hereditary Benefits	158
7.2.2	The Transformation of the Feudal Relationship	160

7.2.3	The Accumulation of Fiefdoms	160
7.2.4	From Public to Private Rule: The “Feudal Revolution”	161
7.3	The Church as a Bulwark Against the Disintegration of Public Power	162
7.3.1	The Defense of Royal Authority	162
7.3.2	The Armed Church	163
7.3.3	Moral vs. Political Commitment	164
7.3.4	The Ecclesiastical Imposition of Peace: The Peace and Truce of God Movement	165
7.4	Feudalism and the “Pactist Concept” of Power	167
	References	170

Part III The Origins of the “European States”

8	From Kings to Monarchs: The Resurgence of Public Power in Late Medieval Europe	177
8.1	Late Medieval Monarchy and the Origin of the Western State . . .	178
8.2	From Kings to Monarchs	178
8.2.1	The Consolidation of the Hereditary Principle as the Basis of Royal Legitimacy	179
8.2.2	A Territorial Monarchy	182
8.2.3	An Expanding Monarchy	183
8.2.4	An Administrative Monarchy	183
8.3	The Triumph of Monarchy Over Christian Universalism	185
8.4	The Medieval Origins of the “Rule of Law”: Pacts as a Legal Restraint on Territorial Monarchy	187
8.4.1	The Nobility’s Resistance to Losing Its Political Power	188
8.4.2	Urban Autonomy	188
8.5	Towards the Shared Exercise of Power	190
8.5.1	The Rise of State Assemblies	190
8.5.2	The Origins of the Representative Principle	192
8.6	A King Subject to the Law	197
8.7	Europe’s First “Constitutional” Texts?	198
	References	203
9	The Apogee of Royal Power: Absolute Monarchy (The Sixteenth and Seventeenth Centuries)	211
9.1	From Territorial to Absolute Monarchy	212
9.1.1	The Modern Age and the Triumph of Royal Absolutism	212
9.1.2	From Christian Universalism to Independent Monarchies	212
9.1.3	Searching for a New Legitimacy: The Prevention of Anarchy as a Justification for Power	216
9.2	The Abandonment of Medieval Pact-Based Rule	220

9.2.1	Cities' Loss of Political and Legal Autonomy	220
9.2.2	The Subjugation of the Nobility	223
9.2.3	The Decline of the Assemblies of the Estates	224
9.3	The State of the Prince	229
9.3.1	The Expansion of Royal Jurisdiction	230
9.3.2	A King Above the Law?	231
9.4	Absolutism Versus Autocracy: The Legal Limits of Royal Absolutism	234
9.4.1	Absolute Kings, Constrained by Divine and Natural Law	235
9.4.2	The Limits of "Fundamental Laws"	236
9.4.3	Respect for Traditional Customs	237
9.4.4	The Relative Autonomy of the Ancien Régime's Judges	238
9.5	Absolute Monarchy and the Increasing Power of the European States	240
9.5.1	The Technical Advantages of Absolutism	241
9.5.2	The Administrative Expansion of Absolute Monarchies	242
9.5.3	Towards a Europe of "National" Monarchies	244
	References	249
10	From the Conservative King to the Reformist Monarch:
	The Stage of Enlightened Absolutism (Eighteenth Century)	257
10.1	The Crisis of Classic Absolutism	258
10.1.1	A Century of Transformation	258
10.1.2	The "Philosophes" and the Kings	259
10.1.3	Absolutism vs. Despotism	260
10.2	A New Legitimacy: From Christian to Secular Monarchs	260
10.3	Enlightened Reformism or the New Spirit of Absolute Power	264
10.3.1	The State: From Guardian of Order to Protector, Educator and Reformer	264
10.3.2	The "Depatrimonialization" of the Monarchy and the Transformation of the State	267
10.4	Enlightened Absolutism and the "Rule of Law"	270
10.4.1	The Enlightened Monarchs and the Law	270
10.4.2	Frederick II's Sonderweg	272
10.4.3	The Rationalization of the Legal System	273
10.5	The Expansion of Enlightened Absolutism in Eighteenth Century Europe: The Great Enlightenment Monarchs	274
10.5.1	The Austrian and the Prussian Models and Its Reception in Russia	274
10.5.2	Portugal in the Pombal Era	276
10.5.3	The Eighteenth Century Revolution in Spain	277
10.5.4	The French and British Exceptions	279
	References	281

11 From Absolute to Limited Monarchy: The British Origins of Parliamentary Government	287
11.1 A Peculiar Constitutional History	288
11.2 The Origins of Assembly-Based Government	289
11.2.1 From the Germanic Kingdoms to the Feudal Stage . . .	289
11.2.2 The Westminster Parliament Appears	291
11.2.3 The Political Consolidation of Parliament	293
11.3 Parliament and the Absolutism of the Tudors	294
11.4 Dynastic Change and the Triumph of Parliament: The Two English Revolutions of the Seventeenth Century	296
11.4.1 The Kings of Scotland on the English Throne: The Stuarts	296
11.4.2 The First English Revolution: Oliver Cromwell and the Only “Republic” in English History	297
11.4.3 The Appearance of Political Parties	297
11.4.4 The Second (and Last) English Revolution (1688) . . .	298
11.4.5 The Religious Issue and the Transformation of England’s Constitutional Framework	300
11.5 The Emergence of the United Kingdom and the Consolidation of Parliamentary Preeminence	301
11.6 The Rise of the Hanover Dynasty and the Formation of the Parliamentary Regime	302
11.6.1 Robert Walpole and the Linguistic Origins of the Parliamentary Regime	302
11.6.2 The Consolidation of the “Parliamentary System” . . .	303
11.6.3 The Democratization of the Parliamentary System (1832–1928)	306
11.6.4 The Consolidation of the Legislative Superiority of the House of Commons: The Parliament Act (1911)	308
11.6.5 The Legislative Recognition of the Prime Minister (1937)	308
References	311

Part IV The Rise of the Nation-State

12 From Monarchy to Representative Government: The American “Revolution”	321
12.1 Revolution as a Social Instrument of Political Change	322
12.1.1 The Example of Prussian Social Inflexibility	322
12.1.2 The English Case: The Gradual Transformation of a Political Constitution	323
12.1.3 Rupture as an Instrument of Change: The American and French Revolutions	324
12.2 From the War of Independence to the American Revolution . . .	325
12.3 The First Europeans in the Americas	326

12.3.1	The Spanish and the Portuguese	326
12.3.2	French and Dutch Expeditions	326
12.3.3	The Origins of the English Presence in America . . .	327
12.4	Spanish vs. English Colonization	328
12.4.1	The “Centralized” Model of Spanish Colonization . .	328
12.4.2	The English Model: “Decentralized” Colonization . .	330
12.5	The Development of English Colonization	331
12.5.1	The First English Colony: Virginia (1607)	331
12.5.2	Religious Colonization	333
12.5.3	The Proprietary Colonies	336
12.5.4	New Colonies After the Restoration (1660)	338
12.5.5	Political Variety and Legal Autonomy of the English Colonies in America	341
12.6	The Colonists and the British Crown	343
12.6.1	The Colonial Explosion	343
12.6.2	The First American Intervention of the English Crown: The War Against France	344
12.6.3	The Price of Victory	345
12.6.4	The Fiscal Origins of the Rebellion	345
12.6.5	The First Continental Congress in Philadelphia (1774)	347
12.7	The War of Independence (1776–1781)	347
12.7.1	The First Armed Clash: The “Battle” at Lexington (April 19, 1775)	347
12.7.2	The Second Continental Congress and the Declaration of Independence	348
12.7.3	The Course of the Conflict	348
12.7.4	The Peace of Versailles and the Recognition of a New Nation: The United States of America	350
12.8	The West’s First Liberal State	351
12.8.1	From Locke to Jefferson	351
12.8.2	The American Revolution as a Rupture with the Old Order	352
12.8.3	A Precarious “Union”: The Articles of Confederation	355
	References	358

13 From Absolute Monarchy to Democratic Absolutism:

	The French Revolution	371
13.1	A Turning Point in European Constitutional History	372
13.2	The Monarchy as the Historical Basis of the French State . . .	373
13.2.1	From Clovis I to Charlemagne	374
13.2.2	A Hereditary, Sovereign and Territorial Monarchy . . .	375
13.2.3	The Hundred Years’ War and the Bolstering of Monarchical Prestige and Power	376

13.2.4	The Era of Absolutism: Louis XIV's Monarchy as a Landmark Reign	377
13.3	From the Ancien Régime to the Revolution	378
13.3.1	Louis XV and the Decline of the French Monarchy	378
13.3.2	Reactionary Forces Prevail in French Society	381
13.4	The French Revolution	384
13.4.1	From the Revolt of the Privileged to the Estates General	384
13.4.2	The Estates General	386
13.4.3	From the Estates General to the Rebellion of the Third Estate (May 5–June 27, 1789)	388
13.4.4	The Rebellion of the Third Estate	389
13.4.5	The Two Revolutions	391
13.4.6	From Monarchy to Republic	392
13.5	What Lasting Effects Did the French Revolution Have?	394
13.5.1	The Appearance of “National Sovereignty”	394
13.5.2	The Origins of “National” Patriotism	394
13.5.3	The Symbols of the French State	395
13.5.4	The Reinforcement of the State	396
13.5.5	The Social Transformation of France	398
13.5.6	The European Dimension of the French Revolution	398
13.6	The Failure of Assembly-Based Government	399
	References	405
14	The Return of the Monarchical Principle (I). The Origins of North American Presidentialism	415
14.1	The Development of a Republican “Monarchy”: The Presidential System	416
14.1.1	The Crisis of Democratic Assembly-Based Governments	416
14.1.2	The Resurgence of Executive Power	416
14.2	Thirteen States, One Nation: From the Articles of Confederation to the Federal Republic	417
14.2.1	The Stage of the Constitutional Debate (1783–1787)	418
14.2.2	The Reopening of a Constitutional Convention	420
14.3	The Origins of the Presidential System	422
14.3.1	The Constitutional Convention Endorses the Principle of a Strong National Government	422
14.3.2	The Placement of Limits on Federal Power: The Strict Application of the Division of Powers and the Establishment of a “Presidential” System	422
14.3.3	A “Great Compromise” for the Legislative Branch (Congress)	423

14.3.4	A President Heading the Executive Branch	423
14.3.5	The Separation of Powers as the Essence of the Presidential System	424
14.3.6	The Judicial Power as a Constitutional Referee: The Revolutionary Principle of “Judicial Review” as a Safeguard Against the Tyranny of the Majority	424
14.4	A New Constitution for a New Federal State	425
14.4.1	Approval and Ratification of the Constitution	425
14.4.2	A New Limit on Federal Power: The Bill of Rights	426
14.4.3	The Principle of Term Limits	427
14.4.4	The Constitution as the New Nation’s Birth Certificate	427
14.5	Relations Between the States and the Federal Government After 1789	427
14.5.1	The Implementation of Judicial Review	429
14.5.2	From 13 to 50 States	430
14.5.3	A Problematic Expansion	434
14.5.4	The Protection of Fundamental Rights: The Union vs. the States	437
	References	443
15	The Return of the Monarchical Principle (II). The French State. From Imperial Bonapartism to Republican Presidentialism	449
15.1	Napoleonic France: From Republic to Monarchy	450
15.1.1	A Genius Named Napoleon Bonaparte	451
15.1.2	The Peculiar “Napoleonic Constitutionalism”	452
15.1.3	A Return to the Roman Model?	454
15.1.4	A New Monarchy for a New Regime	455
15.2	From Assembly-Based Government to Executive Government	456
15.2.1	Napoleon and State Reform	456
15.2.2	The Extreme Centralization of the New Administrative State	457
15.2.3	Judicial Reform and the Creation of Administrative Jurisdiction	457
15.3	An Interventionist State	458
15.3.1	Religious Reform	459
15.3.2	Economic Reform	459
15.3.3	A Failed Attempt at Social Reform: The “Legion of Honor”	460
15.3.4	Educational Reform: Grammar Schools, Special Schools of Higher Education, and Universities	461
15.3.5	Legal Reform and the Unification of Private Law: Le Code Civil (March 21, 1804)	463

15.4	The Constitutional History of France After Napoleon: From Monarchy to Republic	465
15.4.1	From Absolutist Restoration to the July Monarchy . . .	465
15.4.2	From the Second Republic to the Second Empire . . .	466
15.4.3	From the Commune to the Third Republic	468
15.4.4	From Petain's "French State" to De Gaulle's Presidential Republic	471
15.4.5	French Semi-presidentialism: A Return of the Napoleonic Model of State?	474
	References	479
16	The Golden Era of Liberalism and the Apogee of the Nation-State	489
16.1	From Absolutism to Liberalism	491
16.2	The Europe of the Restoration (1815–1848)	493
16.2.1	The Congress of Vienna	493
16.2.2	The Holy Alliance or the Return of Divine Legitimacy	494
16.2.3	Metternich and the Counterrevolutionary Principle of Legitimate Intervention	495
16.2.4	An Exception to the Principle of Nation-State Confrontation: The Metternich System as a Forerunner of European Integration	495
16.2.5	The Impossibility of Restoring Absolutism	496
16.3	The Liberal Alternative: A State with Limited Powers and Controlled by an Economic Elite	497
16.3.1	Legal Limits on State Power: Constitutions and Fundamental Rights	497
16.3.2	The Politicization of the Term "Nation"	499
16.3.3	From Absolute Monarchy to Liberal Oligarchy: The Era of Censitary Suffrage	500
16.4	The Liberal Revolution	502
16.4.1	Moderate Liberalism	503
16.4.2	"Revolutionary Liberalism"	504
16.4.3	Spain, Spearheading the Liberal Revolution: Riego's Revolt (1820)	505
16.4.4	France Comes to Lead the Liberal Revolution (1830)	509
16.5	The Revolution of 1848 as the Key to the Spread of the Liberal State in Europe	511
16.5.1	Another Italian Liberal Revolution	512
16.5.2	The Revolution of 1848 in the German Territories . . .	513
16.5.3	The Austrian Empire and the Revolution	515
16.5.4	Prussia vs. Austria: The Fight for German Supremacy	516
16.5.5	Prussia Becomes a Constitutional Kingdom	518
16.5.6	Relative Calm in Europe by 1850	519

16.6	The Unification of Italy	519
16.6.1	Il Risorgimento	520
16.6.2	French Support for the Italian Cause	521
16.6.3	A Democratic Integration	521
16.6.4	Garibaldi and the Annexation of the South	521
16.6.5	The Kingdom of Italy Is Founded (March 14, 1861)	522
16.6.6	The “Roman Question”	522
16.7	German Unification	523
16.7.1	Bismarck, Architect of Prussian Hegemony	524
16.7.2	The Defeat of Austria and the North German Confederation	524
16.7.3	The Franco-Prussian War and the Second Reich	525
16.7.4	A Top Down Integration in a Federal and Laic State	526
16.8	Imperial Russia as a Final Bastion of Autocracy	527
16.8.1	From Enlightened Absolutism to the Consolidation of Autocracy	527
16.8.2	Speransky and the First Attempt to Establish the Principle of the Rule of Law in Imperial Russia	528
16.8.3	The Revolution of 1905 and the First Russian Constitution (1906)	529
16.9	Colonialism and Confrontation: The International Consequences of the Triumph of the Nation-State Model	530
16.9.1	The Golden Age of Colonialism	530
16.9.2	Nationalism and Confrontation: The Europe of the “Armed Peace”	531
16.10	World War I and the Crisis of the Liberal State Model	533
16.10.1	The Implosion of the Nation-State System	533
16.10.2	The Assassination in Sarajevo and Europe’s Suicide	533
16.10.3	The Dominos Fall	535
16.10.4	An Apocalyptic Conflict	535
16.10.5	The Constitutional Consequences of World War I: The End of Liberalism and the Resurgence of State Power	536
	References	541
17	The Triumph of the State Over the Nation: From Totalitarianism to Interventionism	555
17.1	From Liberalism to Interventionism	557
17.2	The Triumph of Big Capitalism and the Transformation of the Western World	558
17.2.1	The Inventions That Changed the World	558
17.2.2	Demographic Expansion and the Concentration of Urban Populations	563

17.3	The Social Consequences of Economic Expansion	564
17.3.1	The Middle Class and the Proletariat	564
17.3.2	The Origins of “the Social Question”	565
17.4	The Constitutional Consequences of the Social Question	567
17.4.1	From Censitary to Universal Suffrage	567
17.4.2	The Questioning of the Laissez Faire Principle: The Socialist Approach	568
17.4.3	The Conservative Approach: Bismarck’s Sozialpolitik	571
17.4.4	The Return of the Interventionist State	573
17.5	The Russian Revolution and the First Triumph of Totalitarianism	573
17.5.1	Lenin and the Soviet Revolution	574
17.5.2	International Proletarianism vs. the Capitalism of the Liberal Nation-States	574
17.6	The European Oligarchies React by Defending “National Socialism”	576
17.6.1	Perfectly Legal Dictatorships	578
17.6.2	An Adapted Legal Theory: From Ihering to Carl Schmitt	581
17.6.3	The Expansion of Social/Legal Protection in the Interbellum Period	583
17.6.4	The Crisis of the Liberal State Model in the U.S.A.: The New Deal	583
17.6.5	A New Deal for Europe?	587
17.7	The Road to War	592
17.7.1	The Expansion of Totalitarianism: The Confrontation Between Communism and Fascism	592
17.7.2	From the Spanish Civil War to World War II	593
17.8	The Triumph of the Welfare State Model	597
17.8.1	The Welfare State and the Rule of Law	598
17.8.2	The Spread of the Welfare State After 1945	601
17.8.3	The United States Stands Alone: From Roosevelt to Obama	602
17.9	The Transformation of the Totalitarian Model of State: Communism After 1945	603
17.9.1	The Marshall Plan and the Raising of the Iron Curtain	604
17.9.2	The Expansion of Communism After 1945	605
17.9.3	The Transformation of the Communist Model of State: The Chinese Example	606
17.10	The Contemporary Transformation of the State Model in Western Capitalist Countries: A Return to Oligarchy?	608
17.10.1	The “Thirty Glorious Years”, or the Contemporary Way of Addressing the Social Question	608

17.10.2	The Neoliberal Way and John Rawls' Theory of Justice	609
17.10.3	Growing Inequality and Its Constitutional Consequences	609
17.10.4	Towards a New Oligarchic Model of the State?	611
17.11	The End of the Nation-State Era and the Beginning of Global Constitutional History?	613
17.11.1	From the League of Nations to the United Nations . . .	613
17.11.2	Governments and Governance: From Authority to Negotiation	615
	References	621

Part V The End of the Nation State?

18	The Crisis of the Nation-State in the Era of European Integration	647
18.1	The Precedents for European Integration	650
18.1.1	The Survival of the Universal Model	650
18.1.2	"Composite Monarchies" as a Prime Example of Unions of States in Europe	652
18.1.3	Assembly-Based Integration: The Singular Case of the Swiss Confederation	657
18.1.4	Westphalia's Peace and the Triumph of the Europe of States	662
18.1.5	Europe Between Imperialism and Coordination: 1789 to 1914	663
18.2	The Idea of Europe from 1918 to 1939	664
18.2.1	Europe Lies in Ruins, at the Mercy of the United States and the Soviet Union	664
18.2.2	The Resurgence of Nationalisms and Disunity in Europe	665
18.2.3	Some Attempts at Integration	667
18.3	European Integration During World War II	672
18.3.1	The Franco-British Union (June 1940)	672
18.3.2	Hitlerian Europe	673
18.3.3	The "Integrationist" Idea in Anti-Hitlerian Europe . . .	674
18.4	European Integration During the Post-War Period (1945–1949)	677
18.4.1	Europe in 1945	677
18.4.2	A First, Unsuccessful Attempt at Integration: The Congress of The Hague (1948), and the Failure to Form a Federal Europe	681
18.5	Step by Step Integration: The Invention of the "Community Method" (1950)	684
18.5.1	The Pioneers: Jean Monnet and Robert Schuman . . .	684
18.5.2	The Schuman Declaration of May 9, 1950	687

18.6	From the European Coal and Steel Community to the European Economic Community (1951–1957)	689
18.6.1	The 1951 Treaty of Paris and the Creation of the ECSC	689
18.6.2	From the Failure of the EDC to the Treaties of Rome (1951–1957)	690
18.7	The Extension of the Community Method to Create a Common European Market, and the Institutionalization of European Integration (1957–1965)	691
18.7.1	The Court of Justice of the European Communities and the European Parliament	691
18.7.2	The European Free Trade Association: A British “Tantrum”	692
18.7.3	The Merging of Community Executives	692
18.8	A Step Back in the Integration Process: A Return to the Intergovernmental Method (1966–1986)	693
18.8.1	The Rejection of Qualified Majority Voting and the Return of Unanimity: The Luxembourg Compromise	693
18.8.2	On the Path Towards Expansion	693
18.8.3	The Democratization of the Integration Process: An Elective European Parliament	694
18.9	Returning to the Community Method: From the Single European Act to the Maastricht Treaty (1986–1992)	694
18.9.1	The Schengen Agreement	695
18.9.2	The Single European Act	695
18.10	Combining the Community and the Intergovernmental Methods: From the Europe of Communities to the European Union (1992–2009)	695
18.10.1	The Maastricht Treaty and the Appearance of the Structured Integration Pillar	696
18.10.2	Towards an Economic and Monetary Union: The Euro as a Common Currency	697
18.10.3	Many New Members	698
18.10.4	The Need to Reorganize the EU: From Amsterdam to Lisbon	698
18.11	The EU of the Twenty-First Century	699
18.11.1	The Lisbon Treaty	699
18.11.2	A Legally Complex Integration	700
18.12	A Provisional Conclusion for an Unfinished Process: What Kind of Integration Are Europeans Looking For?	702
	References	711
	Index	731

<http://www.springer.com/978-3-319-11802-4>

A History of Western Public Law

Between Nation and State

Aguilera Barchet, B.

2015, XXV, 775 p., Hardcover

ISBN: 978-3-319-11802-4