

Contents

1	Introduction	1
1.1	Note on Method	13
	References	14
2	The Politics of Economy	17
2.1	Politics	17
2.2	Economics	20
2.3	Interpreting Soviet Policy in the Context of the German Question	21
2.4	The International System and the Paradoxical GDR Dependency on Soviet Policy	27
	References	32
3	Standing Policy Towards the GDR	35
3.1	Soviet Leadership in Disarray	35
3.2	The German Question in 1953	42
3.3	The Weakening of the GDR Economy and the Uprising	44
3.4	The Victory of the Hardliners and Ultimately Khrushchev	49
3.5	The Legacy of Intervention	55
	References	57
4	The Interplay of Interactive Structures	59
4.1	The GDR's Military Security	60
4.2	Beginning of the GDR's Paradox	62
4.2.1	Military Intervention	62
4.2.2	Inter-German Détente	65
4.2.3	Limiting the Damage	69
4.3	The GDR's Military Security Reaction	75
	References	83

5	Who Generates Policy?	85
5.1	The Soviet–German Security Policy	86
5.1.1	The Soviet Leadership and the German Question	93
5.2	GDR Policy on the German Question	95
5.3	The Changing Leadership Perceptions: New Political Identities	97
5.3.1	Generation Structure	101
5.3.2	Gorbachev Structure	102
5.4	New Thinking in Soviet–German Policy	104
5.5	New Thinkers: A Different Interpretation	107
	References	113
6	Structures of Differentiation: The Split	115
6.1	Roads of Differentiation	115
6.1.1	China	115
6.1.2	Afghanistan	120
6.2	The Epoch of the ‘NPT’	121
6.2.1	The Inter-German Contacts	121
6.2.2	The Reforms	123
6.3	Controversy of Using Military Force	132
	References	143
7	Multiple Political Rivalry: Meaning and Significance	145
7.1	The Domestic Policy	146
7.2	The Diplomacy of the INF: Achieving International Stability	147
7.3	The Inter-making of Policy	154
	References	161
8	The Paradox of Policy Restructuring	163
8.1	The First Transitional Phase	164
8.1.1	The Continuity	164
8.1.2	The Challenge	165
8.2	The Second Transitional Phase	172
8.2.1	The First Decision on German Question	172
8.3	The Third Transitional Phase: Policy Restructuring	174
8.3.1	Gorbachev’s Illusion	174
8.3.2	Radicals Took the Initiative	177
8.3.3	A Tragic End	179
	References	188
9	Conclusion	191
9.1	How the Shifting Soviet Political Perceptions Should Be Considered: Discussion	192
9.2	Adaptive and Confused Understanding?	194
9.3	An Alternative Strategy	200
	References	204
	Index	205

<http://www.springer.com/978-3-319-20000-2>

Soviet Foreign Policy Towards East Germany

Megas, A.

2015, XII, 213 p., Hardcover

ISBN: 978-3-319-20000-2