

Contents

1	The Challenge of Water Governance	1
	References.	8
2	Water Policy—From Panaceas Towards Embracing Complexity	11
2.1	Major Trends in Water Policy Over Last Few Decades	11
2.2	Evolution of the European Union’s Water Policy	12
2.3	Neither Privatization nor Community Governance Can Meet the Water Governance Challenge	15
2.4	Environmental Governance—Shifting Away from Panaceas and Towards the Mastering of Complexity	17
2.5	The Challenges Ahead.	21
	References.	22
3	Conceptual and Analytical Framework	25
3.1	Clarification of Guiding Assumptions and Terminology.	25
3.1.1	Some Definitions	26
3.2	Finding General Patterns	27
3.2.1	Causality and Dynamics in Complex Governance Systems	27
3.2.2	Requirements for a Diagnostic Approach.	29
3.3	Conceptualizing Governance Systems	32
3.3.1	Institutions—Formal and Informal.	32
3.3.2	Role of Actor Groups—State, Non-state Actors	33
3.3.3	Governance Modes—Bureaucratic Hierarchies, Markets, Networks	34
3.3.4	Multi-level Interactions	34
3.3.5	Processes of Social and Societal Learning	35

3.4	Conceptualizing and Operationalising Multi-level Governance Processes	36
3.4.1	Building Blocks of Social Interactions	36
3.4.2	Representing Multi-level Policy Trajectories	39
3.4.3	Functional Analysis of Governance Systems	43
3.5	Concluding Remarks	47
	References	47
4	The Role of Institutions, Actors and Social Networks in Societal Change	51
4.1	Determinants of Institutional Change	51
4.1.1	Institutional Change in Governing the Commons—Rational Choice Approach	52
4.1.2	A Broader Understanding of Institutional Change	55
4.1.3	Patterns of Institutional Change in Political Contexts	56
4.1.4	Institutional Change as Multi-loop and Multi-level Learning	58
4.2	Actors as Agents of Change	62
4.2.1	Theories and Models of the Behaviour of Individuals and Collectives	62
4.2.2	Endogenous Innovation as One Driver of Transformative Change	65
4.2.3	Processes of Social Learning	69
4.2.4	The Importance of Actor Networks on Social Learning	71
4.3	Representation of Actors and Institutions in the MTF	74
4.3.1	Role of Actors in Social Interactions	75
4.3.2	Zooming in Social Learning Processes	77
4.4	Conclusions	80
	References	80
5	Governance Modes	85
5.1	Governance Modes—Conceptualizations	85
5.2	Ideal Types—Hierarchies, Markets, Networks	87
5.2.1	Potential Conflicts Between Governance Styles	91
5.3	Governance Modes—Hybrid Forms and Meta-Governance: Potential and Limitations	95
5.4	Concluding Comments	96
	References	96

6	Multi-level and Cross-Scale Governance	99
6.1	The Spatial Dimension of Water Governance	99
6.1.1	Evolution from Local to Global Water Governance	99
6.1.2	Characterization of Spatial and Temporal Dimensions of Water Resource Problems	103
6.1.3	Social Construction of Scale in Water Resource Problems	106
6.2	Conceptualization of Multi-level Water Governance	108
6.2.1	Multi-level Bureaucracies	108
6.2.2	Polycentric Governance	110
6.3	The Nature of Linkages Across Administrative Levels	114
6.3.1	OECD Studies on Challenges in Multi-level Water Governance	114
6.3.2	Representation of Multi-level Governance in the MTF	117
6.4	Overall Conclusions	119
	References	119
7	Shaping Human—Environment Interactions	125
7.1	Human—Environment Interactions	125
7.1.1	A Historical Account of a Complex Relationship	125
7.1.2	Conceptualizing Human—Environment Interactions	126
7.2	Ecosystem Services	128
7.2.1	Definition and Categorization	128
7.2.2	Trade-off and Synergies—Interdependencies Between Services	130
7.2.3	Governance of Ecosystem Services—Beyond Monetary Valuation	132
7.3	Environmental Hazards	136
7.3.1	Hazards to Humans Emanating from Natural Events	136
7.3.2	Assessing and Managing Risks Emanating from Natural Hazards	139
7.3.3	Hazards for the Environment Emanating from Human Activities	145
7.3.4	Trade-off and Synergies—Complex Interdependencies Between Services and Hazards	147
7.4	Drivers of Change—Integrated Governance of SESs	151
7.5	Concluding Remarks	154
	References	154
8	A Theory on Water Governance Dynamics	159
8.1	Elements of a Theoretical Framework	159
8.2	Understanding the State of Water Governance Systems	161

8.2.1	Performance	161
8.2.2	Characteristics of a Water Governance System	162
8.2.3	Context	166
8.3	Understanding Processes of Transformative Change	167
8.3.1	Sustainability Transformations—An Evolutionary Perspective.	167
8.3.2	Interplay Between Formal and Informal Processes.	169
8.3.3	A Multi-level Perspective on Transformative Change	174
8.4	Conclusions	177
	References.	178
9	A Methodological Framework for Empirical Analysis.	181
9.1	Methods for Comparative Analysis	181
9.2	Harmonized Databases and Governance Indicators	184
9.2.1	Standardization in the Social Sciences	184
9.2.2	Standardized Databases and Analytical Protocols for the MTF.	188
9.2.3	Illustration of Applications of MTF Databases	193
9.2.4	Methodological Diversity.	196
9.3	Conclusions	198
	References.	199
10	Empirical Analyses—From Single Case Studies to Comparative Analyses.	203
10.1	Overview on Different Thematic Clusters.	203
10.2	Characterization of Dynamic State	205
10.2.1	Moving from Panaceas to a Diagnostic Approach—the Twin2Go Project	205
10.2.2	Requirements for Adaptive Governance and Management	219
10.2.3	Insights on Dynamic States	223
10.3	Analysis of Social Learning Processes	224
10.3.1	HarmoniCOP—Social Learning in Multi-party Interactions	224
10.3.2	Framing of Uncertainties	227
10.3.3	Insights into Social Learning Processes	230
10.4	Analysis of Transformative Change.	231
10.4.1	Factors That Facilitate Transformative Change	232
10.4.2	Informal Institutions—Curse or Blessing?	235
10.4.3	Policy Experiments in China in Support of Transformative Change	240
10.4.4	Insights on Transformative Change	243
10.5	Overall Conclusions and the Way Forward	244
	References.	246

11 Virtual and Real World Experimentation	249
11.1 Simulation Models as Virtual Laboratories	249
11.1.1 Supporting Theory Integration	251
11.1.2 An Evidence-Based Simulation Model Using Heuristics	251
11.1.3 Exploratory Analysis of Social Learning Processes . . .	257
11.1.4 Potential of Model Simulations as Virtual Laboratories	260
11.2 Participatory Modelling to Support Social Learning.	261
11.3 Action Research—Building Transformative Capacity.	266
11.4 Concluding Comments	268
References.	269
12 From Understanding to Transforming	273
12.1 Taking Stock and Thinking Ahead	273
12.2 Promising Global Discourses and Change Agents	275
12.2.1 The Water-Energy-Food Nexus.	275
12.2.2 Water Security	276
12.2.3 Bioeconomy and Green Infrastructure	279
12.2.4 Sustainable Development Goals	280
12.3 The Way Forward.	282
References.	282
Index	285

Water Governance in the Face of Global Change
From Understanding to Transformation

Pahl-Wostl, C.

2015, XV, 287 p. 48 illus., Hardcover

ISBN: 978-3-319-21854-0