

Contents

1	Introduction	1
1.1	Scope of Research	6
1.2	The State of the Field	8
1.3	Sources	12
1.4	Methodological Tenets	13
	References	18
2	Naval Power and Its Role in China's Rise	21
2.1	Naval Power, Sea Power, Maritime Power, and National Power	21
2.1.1	The Importance of Critical Technologies	23
2.1.2	Sea Power and National Power	25
2.1.3	China's Strategic Interest in Acquiring Sea Power	28
2.2	The Impact of China's Domestic Politics on Naval Modernization	28
2.2.1	The Historical Meaning of China's Economic Growth Miracle	29
2.2.2	The Imperative of Regime Survival	31
2.2.3	Domestic Threats to Political Stability	34
2.2.4	Creating National Unity Through Nationalist Propaganda	35
2.2.5	Necessary Conditions for China's Further Development	37
2.2.6	China's Integration into the World Trade System	38
2.3	Maritime Geography as a Factor for China's Naval Development	40
2.3.1	Dependence on Maritime Trade Routes	40
2.3.2	Military Alliances in China's Neighborhood	42
2.3.3	China's Difficult Maritime Geography	45
	References	52

3	Comparing Naval Capability and Estimating the Cost Impact	57
3.1	The Task of Classifying Navies According to Capability	59
3.1.1	The World's Naval Hierarchy and China's Current Status	60
3.1.2	What Is an "Adequate" Level of Naval Capability?	62
3.2	Principal Naval Weapon Systems and Their Strategic Functions	64
3.2.1	Naval Mission Types and Related Hardware Requirements	65
3.2.2	Major Naval Vessel Types and Their Role Within the Fleet	71
3.2.3	China's Warship Inventory	76
3.3	Service Lives, Fleet Age Structures, and Procurement Cycles	77
3.4	The Impact of Network-Centric Warfare on Naval Shipbuilding	83
3.5	Cost Implications of Naval Power	88
3.5.1	Interpreting Military Spending Levels	90
3.5.2	China's Level of Spending in Comparison	92
3.6	Assessing Overall Militarization	100
3.7	Economic Constraints Influencing China's Naval Build-Up	104
	References	105
4	Producing Naval Weapon Systems: The Industrial Basis of Naval Power	109
4.1	Analyzing Production Capabilities	111
4.2	Autarchy and Partnerships in the Naval Weapons Industry	112
4.3	The Role of Combat System Suppliers in Naval Shipbuilding	114
4.3.1	Regional Distribution Patterns of Leading Arms Producing Industries	118
4.3.2	The Powerful Role of the "System Houses"	120
4.3.3	A Maze of Defense Industry Networks	122
4.4	China's Rising Military-Industrial Complex	126
4.4.1	The Quest for State-Led Innovation	126
4.4.2	Combating Bureaucratic Inertia Through Partial Privatization	129
4.4.3	China's Progress in Critical Naval Technologies	133
4.5	China's Indigenous Shipbuilding and Component Industry Development	135
4.5.1	China's Commercial Shipbuilding Industry	136
4.5.2	The Prospects for Spillover Effects from Commercial to Naval Shipbuilding	139
4.6	China's Transnational Shipbuilding Partnerships	146
4.6.1	Foreign-Induced Disruptions in China's Naval Shipbuilding	146

4.6.2	China as a Recipient of Naval Technology Transfers, Pre-1991	147
4.6.3	Trading with Russia and Ukraine, Post-1991	150
4.6.4	Coping with the Arms Embargo	155
4.6.5	China as a Supplier of Naval Technology	158
4.7	Summary: Industry-Related Factors Influencing China's Naval Prowess	164
	References	165
5	The PLA Navy's Capability Profile	171
5.1	Historical Development Trajectory of the PLAN: Major Milestones	172
5.2	Comparative Force Size in Relation to Territory	175
5.3	Fleet Age Structure and Principal Naval Weapon Systems	182
5.3.1	The PLAN's Major Surface Combatants	182
5.3.2	Naval Power Projection Weapon Systems: Carriers and Nuclear Submarines	210
5.3.3	China's Conventional Submarine Fleet	222
5.3.4	Summary of Technical Aspects Influencing Combat Proficiency and Total Capability	231
5.4	The PLAN's Operational Capability	233
5.4.1	Primary Function, Maximum Mission Capability, and Mission Flexibility	233
5.4.2	Logistics and Maintenance Issues	236
5.4.3	Naval Training and Human Resources Issues	239
5.5	Summary: The PLAN's Overall Capability Profile	249
	References	250
6	Strategic Implications of China's Naval Build-Up	255
6.1	China's Emerging Naval Posture	258
6.2	Russia and China: An Entente Cordiale in the Making?	260
6.2.1	Russian Support for China's Military Modernization	262
6.2.2	Possible Consequences of the Ukraine Crisis	263
6.3	The China-Pakistan-India Triangle	266
6.3.1	China's Strategic Partnership with Pakistan	266
6.3.2	Indian Concerns over China's Presence in South Asia	269
6.4	The Korean Peninsula and China	272
6.4.1	China's Uneasy Partnership with North Korea	272
6.4.2	China and South Korea	274
6.5	The Taiwan Question	277
6.5.1	Taiwan as a Factor in China's Naval Build-Up	278
6.5.2	Defending an Island: Taiwan's Quest to Preserve the Status Quo	279
6.6	Japan: Pacifist Tradition vs. New Assertiveness	286
6.7	The South China Sea Issue and China	292

6.8	The U.S. and the Future of “Pax Americana” in the Asia Pacific	297
6.9	The European Union’s Concerns Regarding Asia’s Naval Power Shift	301
	References	305
7	Concluding Remarks and Summary of Results	313

Assessing China's Naval Power

Technological Innovation, Economic Constraints, and Strategic Implications

Kirchberger, S.

2015, XX, 318 p. 51 illus., 15 illus. in color., Hardcover

ISBN: 978-3-662-47126-5