1	Introduction	1
1.1	Background of Blind Source Separation	1
1.2	Statistics Based Methods for Blind Source Separation	5
1.2.1	Higher-Order Statistics Based Methods	5
1.2.2	Second-Order Statistics Based Methods	7
1.3	Blind Source Separation via Dependent Component Analysis	8
1.3.1	Scenarios of Mutually Correlated Sources	8
1.3.2	Dependent Component Analysis Based Methods	10
	References	14
2	Dependent Component Analysis Exploiting Nonnegativity and/or Time-Domain Sparsity	19
2.1	Nonnegative Sparse Representation Based Methods	19
2.1.1	Sparsity Measures for Nonnegative Signals	20
2.1.2	Estimation of Mixing Matrix and Source Signals	23
2.1.3	Uniqueness Conditions	27
2.2	Convex Geometry Analysis Based Methods	28
2.2.1	Geometric Features	29
2.2.2	Estimation of Source Signals	31
2.2.3	Source Identifiability Analysis	34
2.3	Nonnegative Matrix Factorization Based Methods	36
2.3.1	Nonnegative Matrix Factorization Models	36
2.3.2	Estimation of Mixing Matrix and Source Signals	39
2.3.3	Algorithm Analysis	44
	References	44
3	Dependent Component Analysis Using Time-Frequency Analysis	49
3.1	Fundamentals of TFA	49
3.2	TFA-Based Methods for Mixing Matrix Estimation	52
3.2.1	System Model and Existing Works	52

3.2.2	Mixing Matrix Estimation Under Relaxed TF Sparsity . . .	53
3.2.3	Mixing Matrix Estimation Under Local TF Sparsity. . . .	55
3.3	TFA-Based Methods for Source Recovery	56
3.3.1	Source Recovery Under Strong TF Sparsity	56
3.3.2	Source Recovery Under Relaxed TF Sparsity	59
3.3.3	Recovery of Non-sparse Dependent Sources	65
	References	70
4	Dependent Component Analysis Using Precoding.	73
4.1	Concept of Precoding Based Dependent Component Analysis . .	73
4.2	Precoding Based Time-Domain Method	74
4.3	Precoding Based Z-Domain Methods	80
4.3.1	Using Second-Order Precoders	80
4.3.2	Using First-Order Precoders	85
	References	90
5	Future Work	91
5.1	Future Work for DCA Exploiting Nonnegativity and/or Time-Domain Sparsity	91
5.2	Future Work for DCA Exploiting Time-Frequency Analysis (TFA)	92
5.3	Future Work for DCA Exploiting Precoding	93
