

Contents

1	Why Explore Mars?	1
1.1	Introduction.	1
1.2	Robotic Exploration—The Establishment View	3
1.3	The Curmudgeons' View on the Search for Life on Mars	7
1.4	Why Send Humans to Mars?—The Enthusiasts' View	9
1.5	Sending Humans to Mars—The Skeptic's View.	13
	References	15
2	Planning Space Campaigns and Missions	17
2.1	Campaigns	17
2.2	Planning Space Missions.	18
2.3	Architectures	20
2.4	A Mission as a Sequence of Steps	23
2.5	What's Delivered to the Destination?	27
2.6	What's in Low Earth Orbit	28
2.7	What's on the Launch Pad?.	29
2.8	IMLEO Requirements for Space Missions.	29
	References	29
3	60+ Years of Humans to Mars Mission Planning.	31
3.1	Von Braun's Vision	32
3.2	Earliest NASA Concepts.	34
3.2.1	First Studies	34
3.2.2	Studies in the Early 1960s.	34
3.2.3	Nuclear Rocket Development	36
3.2.4	The Boeing Study of 1968	37
3.3	Early Mars Planning Exterior to NASA	42
3.3.1	The Planetary Society and the SAIC Analysis	43
3.3.2	The Case for Mars II	44
3.4	NASA in the Late 1980s.	44
3.4.1	LANL	44
3.4.2	Sally Ride Study	45

3.4.3	SAIC	45
3.4.4	Office of Exploration Case Studies (1988).	46
3.4.5	Office of Exploration Case Studies (1989).	47
3.4.6	The Space Exploration Initiative and Its Successors	48
3.4.7	LANL	50
3.5	Independent Studies of the 1990s.	50
3.5.1	The Soviets	50
3.5.2	Mars Direct.	51
3.5.3	The Mars Society Mission.	55
3.6	The Pre-DRM Era	59
3.7	NASA Design Reference Missions 1993–2007	61
3.7.1	Design Reference Mission-1 (DRM-1)	61
3.7.2	Design Reference Mission-3 (DRM-3)	73
3.7.3	Mass Comparisons: DRM-3 and DRM-1.	76
3.7.4	ISRU System for DRM-3	78
3.7.5	Design Reference Mission-4 (DRM-4)	81
3.7.6	Dual Landers Mission.	81
3.7.7	Design Reference Architecture-5 (DRA-5).	82
3.7.8	Exploration Strategy Workshop (2006)	85
3.8	Other Mars Mission Concepts	88
3.8.1	Team Vision Approach to Space Exploration.	88
3.8.2	The MIT Study	89
3.8.3	ESA Concurrent Design Facility Study (2003).	91
3.8.4	HERRO Missions to Mars Using Telerobotic Surface Exploration from Orbit	93
3.8.5	Boeing in the 21st Century	95
3.8.6	Free Return Missions	97
3.8.7	Short Stay Versus Long Stay Missions	98
3.8.8	Architectures Based on Flyby and Free Return Trajectories	101
3.9	Recent NASA Activities	102
	References	107
4	Getting There and Back.	109
4.1	Propulsion Systems	109
4.1.1	Propellant Requirements for Space Transits	110
4.1.2	The Rocket Equation	113
4.1.3	Dry Mass of Rockets	116
4.2	Trajectory Analysis	119
4.2.1	Rocket Science 101	120
4.2.2	Mars Mission Duration and Propulsion Requirements.	138
4.2.3	More Realistic Models	141

4.3	Earth to Low Earth Orbit	142
4.4	Departing from LEO	147
4.4.1	The Δv Requirement	147
4.4.2	Mass Sent Toward Mars	150
4.4.3	Nuclear Thermal Rocket for TMI	150
4.4.4	Solar Electric Propulsion for Orbit Raising	154
4.5	Mars Orbit Insertion	157
4.6	Ascent from the Mars Surface	161
4.7	Trans-Earth Injection from Mars Orbit	164
4.8	Earth Orbit Insertion	166
4.9	Gear Ratios	166
4.9.1	Introduction	166
4.9.2	Gear Ratio Calculations	167
4.9.3	Gear Ratio for Earth Departure	169
4.10	LEO to Mars Orbit	170
4.11	LEO to the Mars Surface	173
4.12	IMLEO for Mars Missions	175
4.12.1	Chemical Propulsion and Aero-Assist	175
4.12.2	Use of Nuclear Thermal Propulsion	177
4.12.3	Use of ISRU	178
	References	180
5	Critical Mars Mission Elements	183
5.1	Life Support Consumables	183
5.1.1	Consumable Requirements (Without Recycling)	184
5.1.2	Use of Recycling Systems	188
5.2	Radiation Effects and Shielding Requirements	194
5.2.1	Radiation Sources	194
5.2.2	Definitions and Units	196
5.2.3	Radiation Effects on Humans and Allowable Dose	196
5.2.4	Radiation in Space	199
5.2.5	Radiation Levels in Mars Missions	200
5.2.6	Radiation Summary	203
5.3	Effects of Microgravity	205
5.3.1	Introduction to Generic Effects of Zero g	205
5.3.2	Reviews of Low-g Effects	207
5.3.3	Artificial Gravity	211
5.3.4	NASA Plans for Low-g Effects	215
5.4	Human Factors in Confined Space	216
5.5	Abort Options and Mission Safety	222
5.5.1	Abort Options and Mission Safety in ESAS Lunar Missions	222

5.5.2	Abort Options in Mars Missions	223
5.5.3	Acceptable Risk.	228
5.6	Habitats	229
5.6.1	Habitat Design and Human Factors	229
5.6.2	Terrestrial Analogs of Mars Habitats	230
5.6.3	DRM-1 Habitats	233
5.6.4	DRM-3 Habitats	236
5.6.5	Dual Landers Habitat	236
5.6.6	SICSA Habitat Designs.	239
5.6.7	Other Habitat Concepts.	244
5.7	Aero-Assisted Orbit Insertion and Entry, Descent and Landing	244
5.7.1	Introduction.	244
5.7.2	Experience with Robotic Spacecraft	248
5.7.3	Entry Descent and Landing Requirements for Human Missions to Mars.	254
5.7.4	Precision Landing	264
5.7.5	Development, Test and Validation Roadmaps	266
	References	269
6	In Situ Utilization of Indigenous Resources	273
6.1	Value of ISRU	273
6.2	Lunar ISRU	275
6.2.1	Introduction.	275
6.2.2	Ascent Propellants	276
6.2.3	Life Support Consumables	277
6.2.4	Propellants Delivered to LEO from the Moon	278
6.2.5	Propellants Delivered to Lunar Orbit for Descent (and Ascent)	279
6.2.6	Regolith for Radiation Shielding	280
6.2.7	Visionary Concepts	280
6.2.8	Lunar Resources and Processes	283
6.2.9	Cost Analysis for Lunar ISRU.	291
6.3	Mars ISRU	293
6.3.1	Introduction.	293
6.3.2	Timeline for ISRU on Mars.	294
6.3.3	Mars ISRU Products.	296
6.3.4	Mars ISRU Processes	296
6.3.5	Power Requirements of a Mars ISRU System	313
6.3.6	Reduction in IMLEO from Use of ISRU in Human Mission to Mars.	319
6.4	Fueling Mars-Bound Vehicles from Extraterrestrial Resources	328
6.4.1	Lunar Resources	328
6.4.2	Value of Lunar Water in LEO	330

6.4.3	Percentage of Water Mined on the Moon Transferred to LEO	332
6.4.4	Near-Earth Object Resources	338
6.5	Lunar Ferry for Lunar Descent Propellants	341
6.6	Staging, Assembly and Refueling in Near-Earth Space	343
6.6.1	Orbiting Fuel Depots	343
6.6.2	On-Orbit Staging	350
6.7	Transporting Hydrogen to Mars	352
6.7.1	Terrestrial Versus Space Applications	352
6.7.2	Storage of Hydrogen in Various Physical and Chemical States	356
6.7.3	Boil-off in Space	367
6.7.4	Transporting Hydrogen to Mars and Storing It There . . .	375
6.7.5	Summary and Conclusions	378
	References	378
7	Why the NASA Approach Will Likely Fail to Send Humans to Mars for Many Decades to Come	383
7.1	The Moon-Mars Connection	383
7.1.1	Differences Between Lunar and Mars Missions	383
7.1.2	The Moon as a Means of Risk Reduction for Mars	385
7.1.3	ISRU as a Stepping Stone from Moon to Mars	387
7.2	Characteristics of the Mars Campaign	390
7.3	Destination-Driven Versus Constituency-Driven Programs	391
7.4	Need for New Technology	392
7.5	NASA Technology Roadmaps	393
7.6	Space Science Enterprise (SSE)	394
7.6.1	SSE Scope of Technology	394
7.6.2	Lead Centers	399
7.6.3	SSE Technology Summary	400
7.7	Human Exploration Technology	400
7.7.1	Technology for Human Exploration at NASA	400
7.7.2	Dramatic Changes in the Last Decade	401
7.8	Future Prospects	403
7.8.1	Constraints	403
7.8.2	Clarifying Mars Mission Options	404
7.8.3	Fundamental Needs	406
7.9	Does NASA HEO Have the Needed Mentality?	416
7.10	Conclusions	417
	References	420

Appendix A: Solar Energy on the Moon	421
Appendix B: Solar Energy on Mars	443
Appendix C: Water on Mars	495
Glossary	567
Index	575

Human Missions to Mars

Enabling Technologies for Exploring the Red Planet

Rapp, D.

2016, XXVIII, 582 p. 188 illus., 124 illus. in color.,

Hardcover

ISBN: 978-3-319-22248-6