Editor biographies	IX
Abbreviations	XIX
1 Introduction and epidemiology of meningococcal disease	1
Neisseria meningitidis	1
Disease surveillance	2
Case fatality and sequelae	3
Epidemiology of meningococcal disease	4
Capsular groups causing disease	7
Current issues	12
Summary points	12
References	12
2 Carriage and transmission of Neisseria meningitidis	15
Introduction	15
Detecting the carrier state	15
The natural history of meningococcal carriage	17
Epidemiology of carriage	18
Other Neisseria species	20
Effect of vaccination on carriage	21
Summary points	21
References	22
3 Pathogenesis of invasive disease	25
Introduction	25
Transmission, adaptation, and penetration to the circulation	25
Neisseria meningitidis and intravascular survival	27
Meningococemia: a disease of the endothelial cells	29
Pathophysiological characteristics of clinical presentations of meningococcal disease	32

The immune response	37
Summary points	39
References	40
4 Diagnosis of meningococcal disease	45
Introduction	45
Conventional diagnosis	46
Molecular diagnosis	48
Typing of Neisseria meningitidis	52
Summary and future outlook	54
References	54
5 Clinical aspects of meningococcal disease	57
Introduction	57
Clinical spectrum of disease	58
Symptoms of disease	58
Disease outcomes and prognosis	65
Raising awareness of disease	68
Genetic factors	70
Summary points	71
References	71
6 Treatment of meningococcal disease	75
Introduction	75
Shock	76
Raised intracranial pressure	82
Antibiotic therapy	85
Adjunctive therapies	85
Where to manage children with meningococcal disease?	86
Summary points	88
References	89

7	Prevention of meningococcal disease through vaccination	91
	Introduction	91
	Polysaccharide vaccines	91
	Protein-polysaccharide conjugate vaccines	94
	Production and quality control of polysaccharide and conjugate vaccines	97
	Immunological correlates of protection	98
	Capsular group B vaccines	99
	Summary points	101
	References	102
