

Contents

Part I Ronald J. Fisher

1 Ronald J. Fisher: Advancing the Understanding and Effectiveness of Third Party Interventions in Destructive Intergroup Conflict	3
1.1 Introduction	3
1.2 The Childhood Years: Early Influences	3
1.3 Early Adulthood and the Acquisition of a Profession	5
1.4 The University of Guelph and Applied Social Psychology	7
1.5 The 1980s: The Study of Intergroup Conflict	8
1.6 Training and Consultation in Conflict Resolution and Related Areas	9
1.7 Peace Activism	10
1.8 The 1990s: CIIPS and Cyprus	11
1.9 The Genesis and Assessment of “Interactive Conflict Resolution”	12
1.10 International Training in Conflict Resolution	15
1.11 Continuing Efforts in Interactive Conflict Resolution	18
1.12 Graduate Education in Peace and Conflict Resolution	23
1.13 Conclusion	29
2 Ronald J. Fisher’s Selected Bibliography	31

Part II Texts by Ronald J. Fisher

3 Third Party Consultation: A Method for the Study and Resolution of Conflict	37
3.1 Introduction	37
3.2 Some Examples of Third Party Consultation	38
3.2.1 Applications in the Interpersonal Sphere	39
3.2.2 Applications in the Intergroup Sphere	39
3.2.3 Applications in the International Sphere	41
3.2.4 Some Examples of Related Intervention Methods	42

3.3	A Model of Third Party Consultation	43
3.3.1	The Third Party Consultation Situation	45
3.3.2	Third Party Identity	47
3.3.3	Third Party Role	49
3.3.4	The Identity and Role of Participants	52
3.3.5	The Objectives of Third Party Consultation	53
3.3.6	Third Party Functions and Tactics	56
3.3.7	Third Party Procedures, Supportive Activities, and Program	61
3.4	Toward a Critique of Third Party Consultation	62
3.4.1	Normative Assumptions	62
3.4.2	Factual Assumptions About the Nature of Conflict	63
3.4.3	Some Directions for Future Research	65
	References	69
4	Towards a Social-Psychological Model of Intergroup Conflict	73
4.1	Introduction: Social-Psychological Contributions to the Study of Conflict	73
4.2	Constructing an Integrated, Eclectic Model	78
4.3	System States and Boundaries of the Model	81
4.4	Conclusion: Understanding Protracted Social Conflict	83
	References	85
5	Generic Principles for Resolving Intergroup Conflict	87
5.1	Introduction	87
5.2	The Foundation for Generic Principles	88
5.2.1	Phase I: Conflict Analysis	90
5.2.2	Phase II: Conflict Confrontation	93
5.2.3	Phase III: Conflict Resolution	98
5.3	Conclusion	102
	References	102
6	Interactive Conflict Resolution: A Social-Psychological Approach to Resolving Violent Ethnopolitical Conflict	105
6.1	Introduction	105
6.2	Current Practice in ICR	110
6.2.1	The Problem-Solving Workshop	110
6.2.2	The Psychodynamic Approach	112
6.2.3	A Public Peace Process and Sustained Dialogue	113
6.2.4	Intercommunal Dialogue	114
6.2.5	Training as ICR	116
6.3	Issues Facing the Field of ICR	118
6.3.1	Applicability and Effectiveness	118
6.3.2	Evaluation	119

6.3.3	Funding, Training, Professionalization, and Institutionalization	120
6.3.4	Culture	121
6.4	Increasing ICR's Policy Influence.	122
6.5	Conclusion	128
	References.	130
7	Assessing the Contingency Model of Third-Party Intervention in Successful Cases of Prenegotiation.	133
7.1	Introduction	133
7.2	The Problem-Solving Workshop (PSW)	134
7.3	The Contingency Model	135
7.4	Cases of Complementarity	140
7.4.1	PSWs on the Indonesia—Malaysia Conflict	140
7.4.2	Interactive Problem-Solving in the Israeli—Palestinian Conflict	141
7.4.3	Sustained Dialogue in the Tajikistan Conflict	143
7.4.4	Track Two Conflict Resolution in the Moldova—Transdnistria Conflict.	144
7.4.5	The Contribution of Track Two to the Peru-Ecuador Peace Process	146
7.4.6	Comparative Case Analysis Based on the Contingency Model	148
7.5	Conclusion	151
	References.	152
	American University	155
	About the Author	157
	About this Book	159

Ronald J. Fisher: A North American Pioneer in Interactive
Conflict Resolution

Fisher, R.J.

2016, XIX, 159 p. 30 illus., 22 illus. in color., Hardcover

ISBN: 978-3-319-39036-9