

Contents

1	The Mentoring Process	1
1.1	Introduction	1
1.2	Theoretical Background	3
1.2.1	Theories of Expertise	4
1.2.2	Human and Social Capital Theories	5
1.2.3	Influence on Adult Learning	6
1.3	Mentoring Relationships	7
1.4	Characteristics of Great Mentors	8
1.5	Benefits of Mentoring	9
	References	13
2	Mentoring New and Junior Faculty	15
2.1	Introduction	15
2.2	The Importance of Mentors in the Transition to Higher Education	17
2.3	Mentoring Programs and Examples of Mentoring New and Junior Faculty	18
2.3.1	Assignment of Mentors and Timing	20
2.3.2	Professional Development and Evaluation of Mentoring Programs	21
2.3.3	Promoting Ongoing Communication and Positive Interactions	22
2.4	Topics of Importance for New and Junior Faculty	23
2.4.1	Observations	26
2.4.2	Syllabi	27
2.4.3	Student Evaluations	27
2.4.4	Scholarship	27
2.4.5	Tenure and Promotion	28

2.5	Mentoring New and Junior Faculty that Include Women and Minoritized Racial and Ethnic Groups	29
2.5.1	New and Junior Faculty Who Are Women	29
2.5.2	New and Junior Faculty from Minoritized Racial and Ethnic Groups	29
	References	32
3	Professional Development Through Mentoring	35
3.1	Introduction	35
3.2	Mentoring Faculty that Include Women and Minoritized Racial and Ethnic Groups.	38
3.2.1	Mentoring Faculty Who Are Women	38
3.2.2	Mentoring Faculty from Minoritized Racial and Ethnic Groups.	39
3.3	Co-teaching and Team Teaching	40
3.4	Reflective Practice and Teaching Circles.	42
3.4.1	Japanese Lesson Study as a Method of Mentoring.	43
3.5	Mentoring Through Curriculum Development	44
	References	45
4	Mentoring Graduate Students	47
4.1	Introduction	47
4.2	Mentoring Through Scholarly Projects	51
4.3	Mentoring Through Internships and Teaching.	52
4.4	Mentoring Graduate Students that Include Women and Minoritized Racial and Ethnic Groups	54
4.4.1	Mentoring Graduate Students Who Are Women	54
4.4.2	Mentoring Graduate Students from Minoritized Racial and Ethnic Groups	54
	References	56
5	Mentoring Undergraduate Students	59
5.1	Introduction	59
5.2	Mentoring Through Advisement	60
5.2.1	Mentoring Nontraditional Students	62
5.3	Mentoring Through Coursework and Related Projects	63
5.3.1	Lesson Study	63
5.3.2	Expert Residencies	64
5.3.3	Interdisciplinary Collaboration	65
5.3.4	Scholarly Projects	66
5.4	Mentoring Undergraduate Students that Include Women and Minoritized Racial and Ethnic Groups	67
5.4.1	Mentoring Undergraduate Students Who Are Women	67
5.4.2	Mentoring Undergraduate Students from Minoritized Racial and Ethnic Groups.	67
	References	68

6 Mentoring Opportunities Outside of Academic Buildings:

Field Experiences, Student Organizations, and Athletics 71

6.1 Introduction 71

6.2 Field Experiences and Internships 72

6.2.1 Mentoring by the University Supervisor 73

6.2.2 Mentoring by the Cooperating Teacher 73

6.2.3 Peer Mentoring 76

6.2.4 Professional Development Schools 76

6.2.5 Co-teaching 77

6.3 Living-Learning Communities 78

6.4 Student Organizations and Athletics 79

6.4.1 Mentoring in Student Organizations 80

6.4.2 Mentoring in Athletics 81

References 83

<http://www.springer.com/978-3-319-39215-8>

Mentoring Processes in Higher Education

Laverick, D.M.

2016, XIV, 84 p. 6 illus., Softcover

ISBN: 978-3-319-39215-8