

Contents

1	Introduction	1
1.1	Thesis of This Study	1
1.2	Scope of This Study	3
	References	6
 Part I A Review of Beijing's Urban Development and the Relevant Literature of the Study
2	A Review of Beijing's Urban Development in the Twentieth Century	11
2.1	The Origin of the City	12
2.1.1	From a Strategic Point to a Political Centre	12
2.1.2	Dadu in the Yuan Dynasty	14
2.1.3	Beijing in the Ming and the Qing Dynasties	16
2.2	Urban Development Prior to the People's Republic of China (1900–1949)	20
2.2.1	Introduction of Western Houses into Beijing	20
2.2.2	The First Modern Redevelopment of Beijing's Old City	26
2.2.3	The Master Plan of the City During the War Years	27
2.3	Urban Development Under the Planned Economy (1949–1979)	31
2.3.1	Urban Planning of the New Capital	31
2.3.2	Destruction of the Old City Proper	35
2.3.3	Urban Housing Characteristics	38
2.4	Urban Development Under the Market Economy (1979–2005)	41
2.4.1	The New Master Plans and the Opening of the Urban Land Market	41
2.4.2	The Large-Scale Redevelopment of Beijing's Old City	43
2.4.3	The Rapid Housing Progress	46

2.5	Summary	48
	References	50
3	A Review of the Literature Concerning Urban Structure.	53
3.1	Classification of the Theories	53
3.2	Theories of Urban Land Use.	55
3.2.1	An Overview of the Theories of Urban Land Use	55
3.2.2	The Application of the Theories to This Study on Beijing	58
3.3	Theories of Urban Social Structure	59
3.3.1	An Overview of the Theories of Urban Social Structure.	59
3.3.2	The Application of the Theories to This Study on Beijing	64
3.4	Summary	66
	References	66
Part II	Decline of Courtyard House and Protection of Beijing's Old City
4	The Decline of the Courtyard House and the Large-Scale Redevelopment of the Old City.	71
4.1	The Courtyard House as a Traditional Residence.	72
4.1.1	The Structure of the Courtyard House	72
4.1.2	The Historic Urban Structure of Beijing's Old City	74
4.1.3	The Isomorphic Relationship Between the Courtyard House and Beijing's Old City.	80
4.2	The Decline of the Traditional Courtyard House	82
4.2.1	From the Classic Courtyard House to the "Old and Dilapidated House"	82
4.2.2	Reasons for the Decline of the Courtyard House.	84
4.3	Impact of the Large-Scale Redevelopment on Beijing's Old City.	85
4.3.1	The Destructive Effect of the Large-Scale Urban Redevelopment.	85
4.3.2	The Deficiencies of the Urban Redevelopment Project.	89
4.4	Conclusion	91
	References	92
5	Protecting Beijing's Old City by Establishing a Polycentric Urban Structure for the City	95
5.1	Economic Analysis of the Redevelopment Project in Beijing's Old City.	96
5.1.1	The Economic Principles of Real Estate Development	96
5.1.2	Methods by Developers for Maximizing Profit	101

5.1.3	Effects of Maximizing Profit on Beijing's Old City	106
5.1.4	The Social Costs of Real Estate Development.	109
5.2	Problems with Beijing's Monocentric Urban Structure	111
5.2.1	Estimate of the Impact of FAR on Profits of the Redevelopment	111
5.2.2	Conflict Between Protecting Beijing's Old City and Its Monocentric Urban Structure	116
5.3	Establishing a Polycentric Urban Structure	118
5.3.1	Proposal of a Polycentric Urban Structure for Beijing	118
5.3.2	Criticism of the Master Plan of Beijing (2004–2020).	121
5.4	Conclusion	123
5.5	Case Studies: An Investigation into the Costs and Benefits of the Redevelopment Projects in Beijing's Old City Proper	124
5.5.1	Introduction of the Redevelopment Project	125
5.5.2	Costs of the Redevelopment Project	126
5.5.3	Profits of the Developer and the Affordability by the Original Residents	128
5.5.4	Conclusion	135
	References	135

Part III From Homogeneous Residence to Segregated Residence

6	The Homogeneous Residence Under the Planned Economy	141
6.1	“Work-Unit” and the “Welfare-Oriented Housing System”	142
6.1.1	The Origin of the “Work-Unit” System	142
6.1.2	The “Welfare-Oriented Housing System”	143
6.2	The Homogeneous Feature of the “Work-Unit” Compound.	145
6.2.1	The Structure of the “Work-Unit” Compound	145
6.2.2	The Feature of the “Work-Unit” Compound	147
6.3	Housing Reform and the Changes Taking Place in “Work-Unit” Compounds	150
6.3.1	Reforms in the “Welfare-Oriented Housing System”	150
6.3.2	Changes Taking Place in “Work-Unit” Compounds	152
6.4	Conclusion	154
	References	154
7	The Segregated Residence Under the Market Economy	157
7.1	New Housing Development Under the Market Economy	158
7.1.1	Diversification of the New Residential Housing	158
7.1.2	The Development of Residential Suburbanization	160
7.2	The Trend Towards Gentrification	162
7.2.1	Gentrification of the Old Residential Districts	162
7.2.2	The Impact of Residential Relocation on the Original Residents	164

7.3	Social Polarization and the Trend Towards Residential Segregation.	166
7.3.1	“Hukou” System and the Migrant Population	166
7.3.2	The Phenomenon of Social Polarization	167
7.3.3	Residential Difficulties Experienced by Disadvantaged Groups.	169
7.3.4	The Main Cause of Residential Segregation in Beijing.	172
7.4	Conclusion	174
7.5	Case Studies: An Investigation of the Living Conditions Within the Traditional Residential Districts in Beijing’s Old City Proper.	175
7.5.1	Status of the Residents.	176
7.5.2	Living Conditions Within the Traditional Residential Districts	179
7.5.3	Opinions of the Residents on Residential Relocation	181
7.5.4	Conclusion	182
	References	183
8	Diminishing Beijing’s Residential Segregation by Improving Its Housing Security System.	185
8.1	Analysis of Housing Affordability in Beijing.	186
8.1.1	Housing Affordability Ratings.	186
8.1.2	Housing Affordability of Beijing’s Families	188
8.1.3	A New Residential Structure Emerging in Beijing.	191
8.2	Problems of the Housing Supply to Low-Income Families	192
8.2.1	The “Affordable Housing” Scheme	193
8.2.2	The “Low-Rent Housing” Scheme.	197
8.3	Improving the Housing Security System.	199
8.4	Conclusion	203
	References	204
 Part IV Conclusion
9	Conclusion	209
	Reference.	212
	Index	213

A Century of Change

Beijing's Urban Structure in the 20th Century

Wang, Y.

2016, XXVII, 218 p. 92 illus., 1 illus. in color., Hardcover

ISBN: 978-3-319-39632-3