

Contents

Part I Leadership, Management, and Communication in a Time of Rapid Change

1	Contemporary Challenges and Opportunities at Work	3
1.1	Introduction	3
1.1.1	Silverbacks, Kings and Other Alpha Males	4
1.1.2	The Evil Power of Fascism	4
1.1.3	From Ford to Iaccocca.	5
1.1.4	A Turning Point	5
1.2	Encountering and Meeting Challenges: A Personal Perspective	6
1.2.1	The Limits of Pure Science	6
1.3	The Person-Centered Approach and Its Current Scope in a Nutshell.	9
1.3.1	The Person-Centered Approach as Emergent Paradigm	10
1.3.2	The Person-Centered Approach in the Workplace from a Historical Perspective.	11
1.4	The Nature of Contemporary Challenges and Opportunities.	12
1.4.1	Feelings in the Workplace.	12
1.4.2	Speed of Decision-Making	13
1.4.3	A Fluid Communication Process	13
1.4.4	Effective Use of Virtual Space	15
1.4.5	Integrating Uniquely Personal Qualities.	15
1.4.6	Rapid Change	16
1.4.7	Empathy and Beyond	16
1.4.8	Collaboration in Teams and Groups	18
1.5	Conclusions	19
	References.	20

2	As a Manager—Can I Be Human?—The Two-Agenda Approach	23
2.1	Introduction	23
2.2	The Two-Agenda Approach	24
2.2.1	Creative Tension	25
2.3	Excursion to Leadership Styles	26
2.4	The People-Oriented Agenda	29
2.4.1	The Core Principle	29
2.4.2	Origin	30
2.4.3	Agenda Items	30
2.4.4	Features of the People-Oriented Agenda	33
2.5	Preconditions for Following the People-Oriented Agenda	34
2.6	Conclusions	41
	References	42
3	On Transformation	45
3.1	Introduction	45
3.2	The Experiential Basis of Transformation	46
3.3	Case Example—Manager–Team Interaction	48
3.3.1	Formal Versus “Eye-Level” Leadership	48
3.3.2	Examples of Features Facilitating Transformation	50
3.4	What Changes Are Likely to Result from Transformation?	51
3.5	Conclusions	55
	References	55
 Part II Case-Studies on Transforming Communication in Management
4	Carl Rogers’ Counseling Center in Chicago—A Case Study	59
4.1	Introduction	59
4.2	Insights on Participative Management from Carl Rogers’ Leadership Practice	59
4.2.1	Context	59
4.2.2	Participative Management	60
4.2.3	Dealing with Conflict	60
4.2.4	Meetings	61
4.2.5	Growth-Promoting Atmosphere	61
4.2.6	Clearly Specified Interface to the Rest of the Organization	61
4.2.7	Further Insights	62
4.3	Conclusion	63
4.4	Personal Reflections on Carl Rogers’ Counseling Center in Chicago—A Case Study	63
4.4.1	Rogers as a Leader	63

4.4.2	Naming the “Elephant in the Room ”	63
4.4.3	So How Can Leaders Transform Their Organizations for the Best of Their Members’ Growth and Organizational Success?	64
4.4.4	Humanistic Management	64
4.4.5	Keeping Interface Conditions	65
4.4.6	Staff Meetings	65
4.4.7	Cooperation Over Competition	66
4.4.8	Business Perspective	66
4.4.9	Person-Centered Attitudes and Skills.	66
	References.	67
5	Chairing the World Association for Person-Centered and Experiential Psychotherapy and Counseling	69
5.1	Introduction and Context	69
5.2	Leader Actions, Failures, and Successes.	70
5.2.1	Servant Leadership	70
5.2.2	Communication	71
5.2.3	Facilitation.	71
5.2.4	Other Chairs	71
5.3	Transformations	73
5.4	Reflective Dialogue on: Chairing the World Association for Person-Centered and Experiential Psychotherapy and Counseling.	74
5.5	Personal Reflections on: Chairing the World Association for Person-Centered and Experiential Psychotherapy and Counseling.	76
	References.	78
6	Managing Change, Performance Evaluation, and Controlling with Congruence and Integrity	79
6.1	Introduction	79
6.2	Author’s Message.	79
6.3	Brief Personal History and Context	80
6.4	The Case Studies	82
6.5	Final Comments	86
6.6	Reflections on: Managing Change, Performance, Evaluation, and Controlling.	87
6.6.1	Personal Integrity as the Baseline	87
6.6.2	Trust Your Inner Voice and the Process	88
6.6.3	The “Magic” of Leading from Bankrupt to Blossoming	88
	References.	90

7	How I Changed My Leadership Style from Directive-Confrontational to Open, Appreciative, and Person-Centered	91
7.1	Introduction	91
7.2	My Person-Centered Transformation in Leadership	92
7.3	Some Examples	93
7.4	The Transformation Goes on	95
7.5	Reflections on: How I Changed My Leadership Style from Directive-Confrontational to Open, Appreciative, and Person-Centered	95
7.5.1	Clear Message	95
7.5.2	Body Language	96
7.5.3	Lifelong Learning	96
7.5.4	Ongoing Transformation or How Far Can Boundaries Be Pushed?	97
	References	97
8	Make It Personal: International Futures Forum's Approach to Community Transformation	99
8.1	Introduction	99
8.2	Community Transformation in a Scottish City	99
8.2.1	The International Futures Forum	99
8.2.2	IFF's Shared Assumptions	100
8.2.3	The Inquiry Process	101
8.2.4	Listening to Everybody	102
8.2.5	Participants in the Process	102
8.2.6	Moving from a Plan to an Invocation	103
8.2.7	Unleashing Collective Creativity	103
8.2.8	Cultural Transformation	104
8.3	Conclusion	105
8.4	Reflections on: Make It Personal: International Futures Forum's Approach to Community Transformation	105
8.4.1	Team Effort	105
8.4.2	Collaborative Spirit	105
8.4.3	Shared Principles and Vision	106
	References	106

Part III For the Manager and Team Member

9	The Interpersonal Relationship at Work: The Preconditions of Transformative Communication	109
9.1	Introduction	109
9.2	Active Listening in the Workplace	110
9.3	Three Interpersonal Attitudes as Cornerstones of a Constructive Climate	117
9.3.1	Empathic Understanding, Empathy	117

9.3.2	Problems in the Context of Empathic Understanding	121
9.3.3	Acceptance, Respect	123
9.3.4	Problems with Receiving Acceptance or Respect	126
9.3.5	Congruence	128
9.3.6	Problems with Congruence	130
9.3.7	The Confluence of the Three Person-Centered Attitudes	133
9.4	Coherence.	135
9.5	Conclusion	136
	References.	136
10	Methods for Transforming Communication: Dialogue	139
10.1	Introduction	139
10.2	Dialogue According to David Bohm.	140
10.3	Four Practices Enabling Dialogue.	142
10.3.1	Listening	143
10.3.2	Respecting.	145
10.3.3	Suspending	147
10.3.4	Voicing	148
10.4	Limitations of Dialogue Practices.	151
10.5	Dialogue Versus Discussion	152
10.6	Conclusion	153
	References.	154
11	Transforming Communication Through Intensive Group Experience, Communication Workshops, and Open Case	155
11.1	Introduction	155
11.2	Intensive Group Experience and Communication Workshops	156
11.2.1	Transformations Facilitated by Participating in Person-Centered Intensive Groups.	158
11.2.2	Potentials, Limitations, and Need for Adaptation to Changed Conditions	160
11.2.3	Person-Centered Communication Workshops	160
11.2.4	Summary and Outlook on Intensive Groups and Communication Workshops	163
11.3	Open Case	164
11.3.1	Preconditions.	165
11.3.2	Process	166
11.3.3	Open Case as Perceived by Participants	168
11.3.4	Discussion and Variations	169
11.3.5	Summary and Outlook.	170
11.4	Conclusion	171
	References.	172

12	Integrating the Two Agendas in Key Situations	175
12.1	Introduction	175
12.2	How to Make Meetings Truly Engaging	176
12.3	Developing a Shared Vision and Customer Inclusion	180
12.4	Negotiation	185
12.5	A Person-Centered Approach to Conflict	189
12.5.1	Classical Versus Agile Management	192
12.5.2	Breaking up a Relationship (Is Hard to Do)	193
12.5.3	Conflict with Your Boss	194
12.5.4	Is Rogers “General Law of Interpersonal Relationships” also Valid in the Workplace?	194
12.5.5	The People-Oriented Agenda in Situations of Conflict	196
12.6	Conclusion	198
	References	198
13	Integrating the Two Agendas in Agile Management	199
13.1	Introduction	199
13.2	Agile Management Needs Agile People	200
13.3	Agile Values and Principles	201
13.4	Conclusion	205
	References	206
14	Building and Developing Well-Functioning Teams—The Impact of Transformative Communication	207
14.1	Introduction	207
14.2	Characteristics of Well-Functioning Teams	208
14.2.1	Genuine Interaction, Relatedness, and a High Degree of Autonomy Versus Imposing, Controlling, and Manipulating	210
14.2.2	Considering Whether Collaborative Problem Solving and Collaboration Is an Option	210
14.3	Job Interviews	211
14.4	Case Example: The Hiring Process for Team Members for an EU Project	213
14.4.1	Job Announcement	213
14.4.2	Preparation for Job Interviews	213
14.4.3	Job Interviews	214
14.4.4	Reflection	214
14.5	Decision-Making in and with a Team—The Role of Transformative Communication	216
14.6	Conclusion	223
	References	224

Part IV What Are the Facts?

15	How Neuroscience Can Help to Understand the Working of Emotions and Empathy in Leadership	227
15.1	Introduction	227
15.2	A Simple Model for the Anatomy of the Brain	229
15.3	The Neuroscience of Transformational Empathy	231
15.4	Primary Emotions—Awareness and Control for More Effective Leadership	236
15.4.1	Stress, FEAR, and Relief	236
15.4.2	Confidence and PLAY	237
15.4.3	Reciprocity and CARE	237
15.4.4	Trust and the Interplay of Emotions	238
15.4.5	Do Leaders Need to Control Their Feelings?	238
15.4.6	Effect of Emotions on Decision-Making	241
15.5	Confidence in Leadership—The Oxytocin Factor	244
15.6	Conclusion	245
	References	246
16	Tasks and People: What Neuroscience Reveals About Managing Both Effectively	249
16.1	Introduction	249
16.2	This Is Your Brain at Rest—The Default-Mode Network	250
16.3	The Task-Positive Network Gets the Job Done	252
16.4	Different Strokes (TPN/DMN) for Different Folks (Task-Oriented and People-Oriented)	253
16.5	Becoming Figure and Ground, but not at the Same Time	255
16.6	Learning to Master the Two Domains	257
16.7	Agility for a Combined Solution	259
16.8	Conclusion	260
	References	261
17	Study on Personal Perceptions of Communication in Organizations	263
17.1	Introduction	263
17.2	Data Collection and Demographic Data	264
17.3	Questions, Results, and Discussion	264
17.4	Ideas for Transformative Communication for Leaders, Managers, and Team Members	269
17.5	Conclusion	270
	References	270
18	Transforming Communication in Multicultural Contexts	271
18.1	Introduction	271
18.2	Intercultural Validity	272
18.2.1	Historical Perspective	272
18.2.2	Presence and Application Across Continents	272

18.2.3	Backing by Cognitive Neuroscience	273
18.2.4	Empirical Study on Being Yourself in Different Cultures.	273
18.3	Transforming Communication in Multicultural Projects: Special Opportunities, Special Effort.	275
18.3.1	Active Listening and Self-expression Are Harder to Achieve but Experienced as Essential	276
18.3.2	Understanding Needs Active Effort	276
18.3.3	Contact—Different Expectations and Habits	277
18.3.4	Loosening of National or Cultural Constructs	277
18.3.5	Learning Through Experiencing Transformative Communication in a Group	278
18.4	Managers' Perspectives on Respect and Empathic Understanding in Multicultural Teams	280
18.4.1	Question on Respect	280
18.4.2	Question on Understanding	281
18.4.3	Question on Empathic Understanding	282
18.5	Transformative Communication as Providing a "Meta-Culture" for Multicultural Groups and Teams	283
18.6	Conclusion	285
	References.	286

Part V Conclusions

19	The Social and Value Ramification: Well-Functioning Teams, Collaboration, and Co-actualization.	291
19.1	Introduction	291
19.2	Mapping Global Developments to the Items of the People-Oriented Agenda.	292
19.2.1	Contact	292
19.2.2	Transparency and Openness	292
19.2.3	Respect and Inclusion	293
19.2.4	Understanding	293
19.2.5	Collaboration and Interdependence	293
19.3	Forming Values: The Mature Person Once and Now	294
19.3.1	An Adaptation.	296
19.3.2	Contact	297
19.3.3	Transparency and Openness	297
19.3.4	Respect and Inclusion	297
19.3.5	Encompassing Understanding	298
19.3.6	Collaboration and Interdependence	298
19.4	Conclusion and Final Call to Action.	298
	References.	299
	Index	301

Transforming Communication in Leadership and Teamwork

Person-Centered Innovations

Motschnig, R.; Ryback, D.

2016, XXV, 307 p. 15 illus., Hardcover

ISBN: 978-3-319-45485-6