

Contents

Part I Embedments and Highlights

1 Introduction	3
1.1 Geographical Origin of the Architecture's "Embedments and Highlights"	4
1.2 Architectural Art of "Embedments and Highlights"	6
1.3 Summary	8
References	9
2 "Embedments" Cases	11
2.1 Tree-Embracing Pagoda: Hundred-Year-Old Roots Embracing a Tower	11
2.2 Sunken Courtyards: Audible but Invisible	18
2.3 Avalokitesvara Cave in Yandang Mountain: Peaks Embracing Temple Inside	29
2.4 Ancient Cliff House in Yanqing: Amazing Caves as Shelter	36
2.5 Bezeklik Buddhist Caves: One Thousand Buddhas Halfway up the Mountain	43
2.6 Longmen Grottoes: Limestone Cliffs Containing Giant Buddhas	48
2.7 Mogao Grottoes in Dunhuang: The Legend of Caves at the Foot of the Gobi Desert Mountain	59
References	69
3 "Highlights" Cases	73
3.1 Golden Summit of Mount Emei: Buddha's Light in a Single Glance	73
3.2 Yongbulakang Palace: A Shape Similar to a Temple Built on a Doe's Hind Leg	83
3.3 Shibaozhai Fortress: A Precious Stone by a River and a Fortress on a Mountain	91

3.4 Hanging Monastery of Mount Heng: Ancient Temple Suspended on a Mountainside	102
References	111

Part II Enjoying Mountains and Rejoicing in Waters

4 Introduction	115
4.1 Concept of “Enjoying Mountains and Rejoicing in Waters”	116
4.2 Geographical Origin of the Architecture’s “Enjoying Mountains and Rejoicing in Waters”.	118
4.3 Geographical Language of “Enjoying Mountains and Rejoicing in Waters” Architecture	121
4.4 Summary	122
References	123
5 “Enjoying Mountains” Cases	125
5.1 Longji Ancient Zhuang and Yao Ethnic Villages: Home on the Terrace Farm	125
5.2 Qikou Hillside Cave Dwelling: Comfort Home at Loess Hill	133
References	142
6 “Rejoicing in Waters” Cases	145
6.1 Three Pagodas of Dali: Beauty of the Reflection in Water	145
6.2 Water Longtang of the Grand Canal: Home by the Canal	157
6.3 Diaojiaolou in Fenghuang Ancient Town: Home by the River.	167
References	177
7 “Enjoying Mountains and Rejoicing in Waters” Cases.	179
7.1 Crescent Spring Temple Complex: Temple by the Spring Water in Desert.	179
7.2 Lamasery in the Badain Jaran Desert: Scenery of a Temple and a Lake by the Sand Hill	189
7.3 Xifengkou Underwater Great Wall: Defense Line Stretching from Ridge to Underwater	195
7.4 Wanyao Ancient Village: Chorus of Pottery Kilns and Hydropower Pestles	201
References	208

Part III The Language of Stone and Earth

8 Introduction	213
8.1 Geo-Architecture’ Materials Response: Uncovering Natural Architecture Vocabulary	214
8.2 Material Use in Geo-Architecture: The External Expression of Blending Together with Nature	216

8.3	Material Properties of Geo-Architecture: The Overall Expression Combined with the Nature	217
8.4	Geo-Architecture Material Selection: Taking from Nature Perfectly.	218
8.5	Summary	221
	References	221
9	“The Language of Stone” Cases	223
9.1	Anzhen Fort: A Secure Fortress in the Tempest.	223
9.2	Shujiatang Miao Ethnic Village: Stone Walls, Stone Tiles, Stone Village	231
9.3	Baoshan Stone Town: Naxi People’s Settlement Made of Stone	236
	References	241
10	“The Language of Earth” Cases	243
10.1	Kashgar Local Dwellings on High Platform: Rammed Earth Settlement upon Loess Margin	243
10.2	Khara-Khoto: Loess City on the Silk Road	253
	References	259
11	“The Language of Bamboo and Wood” Cases.	261
11.1	Muleng House by Lugu Lake: Local Wooden House of the Mosuo People	261
11.2	Cuoluozi of the Evenki Ethnic Group: Traditional Houses Built by Pine Wood Poles	273
11.3	Snow Village: Houses, Pines, and Scenery in a Snow World.	279
	References	286
	Appendix	289

Geo-Architecture and Landscape in China's Geographic and Historic Context

Volume 3 Geo-Architecture Blending into Nature

Wang, F.

2016, XXVII, 299 p. 308 illus., 245 illus. in color.,

Hardcover

ISBN: 978-981-10-0487-2