

Contents

1	On Truth, Goodness and Beauty in Traditional Chinese Philosophy	1
2	The Anti-traditionalism of the May Fourth Movement and Academic Freedom	7
2.1	The Dao of Sageness Within and Kingliness Without	8
2.2	People-Oriented Thought	11
2.3	Social Responsibility and Historical Mission	12
3	On Culturally-Hinged Forces During Cultural Transitional Periods	15
3.1	I	15
3.2	II	20
3.3	III	26
4	Concerning Spirit and Beliefs at the Turning of the Century	35
5	May Fourth Movement and the Debates on Transitional Culture	41
6	A Bird's-Eye View of the Impact of Western Philosophy on the East	47
6.1	The Development Characteristics of Philosophy in the New Axial Age	63
6.2	Navigating Chinese Philosophy to Go Abroad	68
6.3	Several Issues Requiring Clarifications	80
7	Repositioning Confucianism in a New "Axial Age"	85
8	Several Crucial Points on Cultural Issues	93
8.1	Culture as a Two-Way Choice	93
8.2	Cultural Transplant and One-Way Flowing	95

8.3	Cultural “Take-Is” and “Give-Is”	96
8.4	Concerning the Issue of “Cultural Awareness”.	97
8.5	Extinction and Co-existence of Cultures	99
9	Synthesizing Chinese Learning with Western Learning Chronologically in Breaking a New Path.	103
10	Three “Carry on” Orientations in Modern Chinese Philosophy	117
10.1	The “Carry-on” of Traditional Chinese Philosophy.	117
10.2	The Carry-on of Modern Western Philosophy	121
10.3	The Carry-on of Marxist Philosophy.	123
11	Confucian Ethical Codes and Modern Chinese Entrepreneurial Spirit	129
12	Chinese Philosophy Under the Influence of Western Philosophy	137
12.1	Thanks to the Introduction of Western Philosophy, Chinese Philosophy Has Become an Independent Discipline . . .	139
12.2	Taking Western Philosophy as a Paradigm May Cause Some Potential Problems in Constructing Chinese Philosophy	140
12.3	Future Development of Chinese Philosophy	142
13	Neo-Confucianism and Chinese National Rejuvenation	145
13.1	Confucianism and the Rejuvenation of the Chinese Nation . . .	145
13.1.1	Breaking Through a New Path by Returning to Its Root.	145
13.1.2	Confucianism and the “New Axial Age”.	146
13.1.3	The Three Dimensions of Confucianism	149
13.1.4	Confucianism and Awareness of Unexpected Development.	151
13.1.5	Confucianism and the Construction of Harmonious Society	154
13.2	Confucianism and Universal Values	158
13.2.1	Seeking a Common Ground Through Cross-Cultural Communication and Dialogues.	159
13.2.2	The Way to Pursue “Universal Values” Among Different Cultures.	160
13.2.3	The Core Value of Multi-modernity	163
13.3	Confucianism and Classic Annotations	167
13.4	Confucianism and the Introduction of Foreign Cultures.	178
13.4.1	Confucianism and the Introduction of Indian Buddhism	179

13.4.2	Confucianism and the Introduction of Western Learning	180
13.4.3	Thoughts That Have Greatly Influenced Chinese Society	183
14	On Ma Yifu's Theory of Six Classics	189
14.1	I	189
14.2	II	189
14.3	III	192
14.4	IV	194
15	The Integration of Confucianism, Buddhism and Daoism	197
15.1	The Theoretical Basis of the "Unity of the Three Religions".	198
15.2	The Imperial Court Policy of the "Integration of the Three Religions".	201
15.3	Popular Beliefs in the "Unity of the Three Religions".	203
16	Confucianism and Marxism	209
16.1	I	209
16.2	II	211
16.3	III	216
	Index	219

<http://www.springer.com/978-981-10-1868-8>

Anthology of Philosophical and Cultural Issues

An exploration into new frontiers

Tang, Y.

2016, XVII, 231 p., Hardcover

ISBN: 978-981-10-1868-8