

Contents

1	Introduction.....	1
	Kenneth C. Nystrom
Part I Evidence from Early Colonial America
2	Renaissance Anatomy in the Americas: A Bioarchaeological Perspective on the Earliest Skeletal Evidence of Autopsy in the New World.....	25
	Thomas A. Crist and Marcella H. Sorg
3	Evidence for Early Seventeenth-Century Surgery and Dissection at James Fort, Virginia .....	41
	Karin S. Bruwelheide, Douglas W. Owsley, Beverly A. Straube, and Jamie E. May
4	A Dissection at the Coffeehouse? The Performance of Anatomical Expertise in Colonial America .....	61
	Ellen Chapman and Mark Kostro
Part II Evidence from Public Cemeteries
5	Partible Persons or Persons Apart: Postmortem Interventions at the Spring Street Presbyterian Church, Manhattan .....	87
	Shannon A. Novak
Part III Evidence from Medical Institutions
6	Teachings of the Dead: The Archaeology of Anatomized Remains from Holden Chapel, Harvard University .....	115
	Christina J. Hodge, Jane Lyden Rousseau, and Michèle E. Morgan

7 Skeletal Evidence of Anatomical and Surgical Training in Nineteenth-Century Richmond .....	143
Douglas W. Owsley, Karin S. Bruwelheide, Richard L. Jantz, Jodi L. Koste, and Merry Outlaw
8 Structural Violence in New Orleans: Skeletal Evidence from Charity Hospital's Cemeteries, 1847–1929 .....	165
Christine L. Halling and Ryan M. Seidemann
9 Dissection and Documented Skeletal Collections: Embodiments of Legalized Inequality .....	185
Jennifer L. Muller, Kristen E. Pearlstein, and Carlina de la Cova
 Part IV Evidence from Almshouse Cemeteries
10 Autopsy, Dissection, and Anatomical Exploration: The Postmortem Fate of the Underclass and Institutionalized in Old Milwaukee .....	205
Sean P. Dougherty and Norman C. Sullivan
11 “You Couldn’t Identify Your Grandmother If She Were in that Party”: The Bioarchaeology of Postmortem Investigation at the Milwaukee County Poor Farm Cemetery .....	237
Patricia B. Richards, Catherine R. Jones, Emily Mueller Epstein, Nicholas W. Richards, Brooke L. Drew, and Thomas J. Zych
12 “The Mangled Remains of What Had Been Humanity”: Evidence of Autopsy and Dissection at Philadelphia’s Blockley Almshouse, 1835–1895 .....	259
Thomas A. Crist, Douglas B. Mooney, and Kimberly A. Morrell
13 Structural Inequality and Postmortem Examination at the Erie County Poorhouse .....	279
Kenneth C. Nystrom, Joyce Sirianni, Rosanne Higgins, Douglas Perrelli, and Jennifer L. Liber Raines
14 Exploring Evidence of Nineteenth Century Dissection in the Dunning Poorhouse Cemetery .....	301
Anne L. Grauer, Vanessa Lathrop, and Taylor Timoteo
15 A Historical and Osteological Analysis of Postmortem Medical Practices from the Albany County Almshouse Cemetery Skeletal Sample in Albany, New York .....	315
Kim Lusignan Lowe
16 Conclusion: The Anthropology of Dissection and Autopsy .....	335
Kenneth C. Nystrom
Index .....	345

The Bioarchaeology of Dissection and Autopsy in the United States

Nystrom, K.C. (Ed.)

2017, XIX, 346 p. 99 illus., 66 illus. in color., Hardcover

ISBN: 978-3-319-26834-7