

Contents

1	Introduction	1
	Patricia G. Patrick
	Defining Informal Science Education	3
	Professional Development	3
	Designing Programs	4
	Bridging the Gap Between Formal and Informal Educators	5
	Public Communication	7
	Final Thoughts	8
	References	9
 Part I Defining ISE
2	Formerly ISE: Preparation for Continual Science Learning	13
	Phyllis Katz
	The Challenge of Words	15
	A Little History	16
	ISE: Language, Teaching and Learning	21
	Continual Science Learning (CSL), Adaptive Core	22
	A New Vision Has Been Growing	24
	Words and Actions	25
	Preparing Continual Science Learners: Implications for Teaching	28
	Continual Science Learning (CSL) Teacher Preparation for Career Teaching/Learning	31
	Implications for Policy	34
	Implications for Funding	34
	Conclusion and Discussion	35
	References	37

Part II Professional Development

3	Informal Science Educators and the Nine Dimensions of Reflective Practice . . . . .	41
	Patricia G. Patrick
	Reflective Practice in ISE . . . . .	42
	Theory and Research. . . . .	44
	Evaluate Teaching Using Research . . . . .	44
	Link Theory with Practice by Reading the Literature and Critically Analyze Your Personal Theories and Beliefs . . . . .	45
	Teaching . . . . .	49
	Study Teaching for Personal Improvement and Reflect Often . . . . .	49
	Be Innovative by Trying Out New Strategies and Ideas . . . . .	50
	Maximize the Learning Potential of the Audience. . . . .	53
	Be an Effective Practitioner by Enhancing the Quality of Teaching. . . . .	57
	Peers . . . . .	58
	Utilize Learning Conversations with Peers or Mentors to Discuss Alternative Perspectives and Possibilities. . . . .	58
	Improve Your Teaching by Being Involved in Professional Development and Training . . . . .	59
	Reflective Practice Is Critical . . . . .	61
	References. . . . .	62
4	Facilitating Deep Conceptual Learning: The Role of Reflection and Learning Communities . . . . .	67
	Heather King and Lynn Tran
	Supporting Deep Conceptual Learning . . . . .	68
	Organizing Knowledge into Mental Models . . . . .	68
	The Value of Externalizing and Reflecting . . . . .	69
	Learning as a Social Process. . . . .	70
	Learning Requires Effort. . . . .	70
	Examining the Support for Learning in the Informal Sector . . . . .	71
	Context . . . . .	72
	Content . . . . .	72
	Objects . . . . .	73
	Choice and Motivation . . . . .	73
	Learning Research. . . . .	74
	“Talk” . . . . .	75
	Examples from Practice. . . . .	75
	Professional Development for Informal Educators. . . . .	77
	Building Professional Learning Communities . . . . .	78
	Reflecting on Practice —A Professional Development Program for Informal Educators . . . . .	79

Final Words . . . . .	80
References . . . . .	81
5 From Acquisition to Inquiry: Supporting Informal Educators Through Iterative Implementation of Practice . . . . .	87
Lauren B. Allen and Kevin Crowley
The Challenge of Professional Development for Part-Time Informal Educators . . . . .	88
A New Approach to School Trips to the Natural History Museum . . . .	90
Iterative Implementation as Professional Development . . . . .	90
Guiding Principles for Inquiry-Based Learning . . . . .	91
Learner Autonomy . . . . .	92
Conversation with Reflection . . . . .	93
Deep Investigation of a Few Concepts . . . . .	94
The Leadership Team and the Core Objectives . . . . .	94
Inside Iterative Implementation . . . . .	97
Conclusions . . . . .	102
References . . . . .	103
6 Museum Science Teaching: Museum Educators' Personal Epistemologies and Created Learning Experiences . . . . .	105
Jung-Hua Yeh
Introduction of NMNS . . . . .	106
Learning Happens Through Interactions with Exhibitions or People . . . . .	107
Social Identity, Personal Science Epistemology, and Staff–Visitor Interaction . . . . .	108
Methods . . . . .	109
Methodological Framework: Case Study Approach . . . . .	109
Observations . . . . .	110
Interviews . . . . .	111
Analytical Process . . . . .	111
Study Background . . . . .	112
Development Process . . . . .	112
Results . . . . .	113
Personal Science Epistemology Reflected in the Learning Process . . .	114
Teaching Goals . . . . .	116
Teaching Plans and Materials . . . . .	116
Roles of Teachers, Learners, and Objects . . . . .	118
Students' Feedback . . . . .	119
Reflections from the Docents . . . . .	120
Conclusion . . . . .	122
Discussion . . . . .	122
The Mission of Science Museum . . . . .	123

	The Professional Development for Docents. . . . .	123
	References. . . . .	124
7	Informal Science Educator Identity Construction. . . . .	127
	Brad McLain
	Why Professional Identity? . . . . .	127
	What Is Professional Identity?. . . . .	129
	Identity and Professional Development . . . . .	130
	STEPS. . . . .	131
	An Experiment in Professional Identity Construction . . . . .	131
	Exploratory Study Results. . . . .	136
	STEPS Social Network Analysis. . . . .	136
	Online Collaboration. . . . .	138
	STEPS Interview Analysis . . . . .	140
	Discussion. . . . .	146
	Conclusion . . . . .	146
	References. . . . .	149
 Part III Designing Programs
8	There Is no “Off Button” to Explaining: Theorizing Identity Development in Youth Who Work as Floor Facilitators . . . . .	153
	Preeti Gupta and Jennifer Negron
	The Context . . . . .	154
	Preeti’s Trajectory. . . . .	155
	Jenny’s Trajectory. . . . .	156
	Theorizing Our Experiences . . . . .	158
	Structures and Identity . . . . .	160
	Cascading Influences. . . . .	162
	Program Design Implications . . . . .	164
	Further Research . . . . .	167
	References. . . . .	168
9	Integrating Mobile Computers into Informal Science Education . . . . .	169
	Heather Toomey Zimmerman and Susan M. Land
	Fostering Learning with Mobile Computing in Informal Environments: Key Concepts . . . . .	170
	Recommendations for Integrating Mobile Computers into ISE Learning Environments . . . . .	172
	Facilitate “Heads-up” Technology Use that Supports Social Interactions Within Informal Spaces . . . . .	173
	Augment the Visitors’ Experiences with Games, Scientific Narratives, and Disciplinary-Relevant Aspects . . . . .	174

Incorporate Activities that Move the Visit Away from a Passive Consumption of Facts Towards the Active Generation and Use of New Knowledge . . . . .	176
Revisit the Learning Experiences Afterwards with the Inclusion of Bridges to Home or Community, Use of Social Media, and Connections to the Same or Other ISE Sites . . . . .	178
Conclusion . . . . .	179
References. . . . .	180
10 Designing Informal Astronomy Education Toward Participatory Learning Environments . . . . .	185
Mi Song Kim
Literature Review . . . . .	186
The Study . . . . .	188
Setting and Participants. . . . .	188
Data Collection & Analysis. . . . .	190
Findings . . . . .	190
EMMA Workshop I . . . . .	193
EMMA Workshop II. . . . .	195
EMMA Workshop III . . . . .	197
EMMA Workshop IV . . . . .	198
Discussion. . . . .	203
References. . . . .	205
11 Developing Effective Pedagogical Approaches in Science Outreach Programs for Young Children . . . . .	207
Christine Howitt, Elaine Blake and Léonie J. Rennie
Background. . . . .	208
Learning Through Play . . . . .	208
Learning Science Through Play . . . . .	209
Adult-Child Interactions in Informal Learning Contexts . . . . .	211
The Early Childhood Outreach Program . . . . .	212
Research Design . . . . .	213
Findings . . . . .	214
Providing Emotional Support for Young Children to Encourage Exploration . . . . .	215
Using Modelling to Demonstrate Interactions for Young Children . . . . .	216
Using Open-Ended Questioning to Extend Young Children's Thinking . . . . .	217
Understanding the Purpose of the Active Role of All Adults . . . . .	218
Acknowledging Young Children's Competence and Capabilities . . . . .	219
Discussion and Implications . . . . .	220
References. . . . .	221

12	Gender Differences Reflected in Conversations at Exhibits . . . . .	225
	Sue Dale Tunnicliffe
	Are Indeed Schools Places Where Children Really Learn? . . . . .	226
	Discussion and Implications . . . . .	237
	Implications. . . . .	238
	Pre-service Teachers . . . . .	238
	Learning for Boys and Girls . . . . .	239
	Final Thoughts . . . . .	239
	References. . . . .	240
13	The Challenges of ‘Measuring Long-Term Impacts of a Science Center on Its Community’: A Methodological Review . . . . .	243
	Eric Jensen and Thomas Lister
	Evaluating Sampling and Representativeness . . . . .	246
	Sampling Description . . . . .	246
	Sampling Limitations . . . . .	247
	Evaluating the Research Design . . . . .	249
	The Limitations of Self-reporting Impacts. . . . .	250
	Acquiescence Bias . . . . .	252
	Reporting Impact on Behalf of Another . . . . .	253
	The Limitations of Indicator-Based Impact Evaluation . . . . .	254
	Evaluating the Statistical Analysis. . . . .	255
	Evaluating the Study’s Claims in Light of Methodological Limitations . . . . .	256
	Conclusion . . . . .	257
	References. . . . .	258
14	Utilizing Indicator-Based Methods: ‘Measuring the Impact of a Science Center on Its Community’ . . . . .	261
	John H. Falk and Mark D. Needham
	Notes. . . . .	265
	References. . . . .	265
Part IV Bridging the Gap Between Formal and Informal Educators
15	Visualising Social Network Structures in the Training of Professional Learning Communities of Educators in Informal and Formal Settings . . . . .	269
	Jakob Egg, Suzanne Kapelari and Justin Dillon
	Introduction. . . . .	269
	Conceptual Framework . . . . .	271
	Communities of Practice . . . . .	271
	The Social Network Perspective . . . . .	272
	Network Analysis . . . . .	272
	Research Question. . . . .	273

Methodology . . . . .	274
Social Network Analysis . . . . .	275
Results . . . . .	276
Egocentric Networks of Individual Participants . . . . .	276
Socio-centric Visualization of Developments in the Total Network of the IPDC2 During the Training Course . . . . .	278
Depict the Process of Key Players' Development . . . . .	282
Discussion . . . . .	283
References . . . . .	286
16 Professional Development: Targeted On-the-Job Trainings . . . . .	289
Chance Sanford and Victoria Sokol
Importance of the Collaboration Between Formal and Informal Learning Environments . . . . .	290
Increasing Student Interest . . . . .	290
Providing Unique Experiences for Students . . . . .	291
Increasing Formal Educator Knowledge . . . . .	292
Maximizing Collaboration Potential . . . . .	293
Houston Zoo Study . . . . .	294
Results . . . . .	295
Discussion . . . . .	295
Informing Leadership Practices . . . . .	296
Conclusion . . . . .	297
Professional Development for Informal Science Educators . . . . .	297
Background and Experience of Informal Science Educators . . . . .	298
Limited Job Training . . . . .	299
Resulting Challenges . . . . .	299
Recommended Solutions . . . . .	301
Finding the Balance . . . . .	302
A New Framework for Professional Development in Informal Science Learning . . . . .	304
A New Era for Informal Science Educators . . . . .	307
References . . . . .	308
17 Multiple Approaches to Using Informal Science Education     Contexts to Prepare Informal and Formal Science Educators . . . . .	311
Emily Hestness, Kelly Riedinger and J. Randy McGinnis
Literature Review . . . . .	313
Influence of Prior Teaching and Learning Experiences . . . . .	314
Modeling Research-Based Approaches to Foster Learning . . . . .	315
Valuing Reflective Practice . . . . .	316
Valuing Communities of Practice: Shared Practices and Shared Vocabulary . . . . .	317
Unique Dimensions of Teaching in Informal Science Education Contexts . . . . .	318

Summary . . . . .	319
Educator Preparation Using Informal Science Education Contexts: Four Approaches . . . . .	319
Approach 1: An Informal Science Education Internship Experience for Undergraduate Elementary Education Majors Preparing to Teach in Formal Settings . . . . .	320
Approach 2: An Innovative Science Methods Course for Undergraduate Elementary Education Majors Preparing to Teach in Formal Education Contexts . . . . .	321
Approach 3: A Course on Connecting Formal and Informal Science Education for Graduate Elementary Education and Environmental Education Students . . . . .	323
Approach 4: A Course on Informal Science Education for Graduate and Undergraduate Education and Environmental Science Students . . . . .	325
Discussion . . . . .	327
Connections to Literature on Informal Science Educator Preparation . . . . .	327
Connections to the Strands of Science Literacy Emphasized in Informal Science Education Settings . . . . .	331
Conclusions . . . . .	333
References . . . . .	334
18 Extending Classrooms into Parks Through Informal Science Learning and Place-Based Education . . . . .	337
Jennifer D. Adams and Brett Branco
Nature of Place and Place Attachment . . . . .	339
Classroom and Parks Meet at the Boundary . . . . .	341
Gateway National Recreation Area: Gateway to STEM Learning . . . . .	341
A Park in Every Classroom . . . . .	343
Art Transformation: Recycled Artworks in Jamaica Bay! . . . . .	344
Place Release and Non-human Living Things . . . . .	346
Sentinels of Shoreline Change . . . . .	348
Engaging Teachers and Students in Place-Based STEM Learning . . . . .	350
Place Attachment and Stewardship . . . . .	350
Preparing Teachers and Students for Place-Based Informal Science Learning . . . . .	351
References . . . . .	353
19 Preparing Informal Science Educators in a Formal Science Teacher Education Program: An Oxymoron? . . . . .	355
Catherine E. Matthews, Susannah Thompson and Sadie Camfield Payne
References . . . . .	385

20 A Comparative Look at Informal Science Education and Environmental Education in Bengkulu Province, Indonesia and North Carolina, USA . . . . .	387
Aceng Ruyani and Catherine E. Matthews
Introduction to Bengkulu Province, Sumatra, Indonesia . . . . .	388
Introduction to North Carolina, USA . . . . .	389
Environmental Threats in Bengkulu and North Carolina . . . . .	390
A Comparison of Bengkulu and North Carolina . . . . .	390
Formal and Informal Science Education in K-12 Schools and Universities in North Carolina and Bengkulu . . . . .	391
Forests in Bengkulu and North Carolina . . . . .	393
Natural Areas, State Parks, and National Parks in Bengkulu and North Carolina . . . . .	395
A Comparison of Educational Programs in the National Parks and Zoos . . . . .	396
Wildlife Refuges and World Heritage Sites . . . . .	398
Charismatic Megafauna and Flora of Bengkulu and North Carolina . . . . .	400
Integrated Conservation Development Projects in Bengkulu:
A Case Study in ISE-Conservation Education . . . . .	401
The Current State of Conservation Education in Bengkulu . . . . .	403
Formal, Non-formal, and Informal Conservation Education in Bengkulu . . . . .	404
Extracurricular Activities and Learning Outside the Classroom . . . . .	405
Scouting Activities in Indonesia and the USA . . . . .	406
Nature Groups, Nature Associations, and Nature Lovers in Indonesia and North Carolina . . . . .	407
Science Tutoring (An Out-of-School Activity) in Indonesia and North Carolina . . . . .	407
In School and After School Competitions (Science Olympiad and Envirothon) . . . . .	408
Summer Programs (4-H, Universities, and Museums) . . . . .	409
Current Status of Herpetology Education in North Carolina and Bengkulu . . . . .	410
Conclusion . . . . .	413
References . . . . .	414
21 Explorers of Nature in Natural History Museums—An Approach to Integrating Children with Refugee or Migration Status . . . . .	419
Alexandra Moormann
Introduction . . . . .	419
Education for Nonnative Students . . . . .	420
Access to Cultural Education and Science Education . . . . .	420
Explorers of Nature . . . . .	421

Description of the Program . . . . .	422
Including Family . . . . .	428
One Project: Many Perspectives . . . . .	428
Discussion . . . . .	431
References . . . . .	432
 Part V Science Communication
22 Preparing Scientists to Be Science Communicators . . . . .	437
Ayelet Baram-Tsabari and Bruce V. Lewenstein
Motivation for Communication Training for Scientists . . . . .	438
Approaches to Science Communication Training . . . . .	439
Potential Learning Goals . . . . .	441
Assessment . . . . .	452
An Online Attitudes and Knowledge Questionnaire . . . . .	454
A Rubric for Assessing Written Popular Communication by Scientists . . . . .	456
Assessing Clarity: Language . . . . .	456
Assessing Clarity: Type of Explanation . . . . .	458
Dialogic Approach: Acknowledge and Show Respect to Multiple World Views . . . . .	459
Effective Pedagogies . . . . .	460
Course Description . . . . .	460
Performance Tasks . . . . .	461
Peer Assessment and Revision . . . . .	465
Reflection (Self-assessment) . . . . .	465
Concluding Remark . . . . .	466
References . . . . .	467
 23 ‘User-Generated’ Educators: The New Frontier or a Far-Fetched Dream? . . . . .	473
Maria Xanthoudaki and Enrico Miotto
It Looks Like Fun, but Do They Learn? . . . . .	474
Today’s Learning for Tomorrow’s World . . . . .	476
Learning and Learning Experts at the National Museum of Science and Technology Leonardo da Vinci . . . . .	478
Training of Learning Experts at MUST: In Principle, In Practice . . . . .	482
The Observation Grid . . . . .	485
Apprenticeship . . . . .	487
Putting Museum Learning Experts’ Training in Perspective . . . . .	488
Conclusions. ‘User-Generated Learning Experts’: The Next Goal? . . . .	490
References . . . . .	491

24 Teaching the Theory of Evolution in Informal Settings to Those Who Are Uncomfortable with It . . . . .	495
Michael J. Reiss
Context . . . . .	495
Scientific and Religious Understandings of Biodiversity . . . . .	496
Changing One's Mind . . . . .	498
Worldviews . . . . .	500
Metanoia . . . . .	502
Informal Versus Formal Settings . . . . .	503
Conclusion . . . . .	505
References . . . . .	505
25 Addressing Nature of Scientific Knowledge in the Preparation of Informal Educators . . . . .	509
Judith S. Lederman and Gary M. Holliday
What Is Nature of Science Knowledge? . . . . .	511
Teaching NOS . . . . .	513
Mystery Skeleton Example . . . . .	514
NOS in Exhibitions . . . . .	518
Presenting Controversy in Exhibits . . . . .	521
Summary . . . . .	522
References . . . . .	523
26 The Attributes of Informal Science Education: A Science Communication Perspective . . . . .	527
Susan M. Stocklmayer and Léonie J. Rennie
Informal Science Learning . . . . .	527
Science Communication . . . . .	530
Modes of Science Communication . . . . .	531
Encouraging Motivation and Engagement in Science Learning . . . . .	533
The Attributes of Informal Learning and the Modes of Science Communication . . . . .	535
Communicating Science to the Public . . . . .	536
Communicating Science with the Public . . . . .	538
Communicating Science Among the Public . . . . .	540
The Importance of Persuasion . . . . .	540
Skills for the Communication of Science . . . . .	541
References . . . . .	542
27 Sense of Conservation: When Is a Black Rat Snake (Elaphe obsoleta) Really Just a Snake? . . . . .	545
Patricia G. Patrick
Middle Level Students' Knowledge of Local Flora and Fauna . . . . .	546
Introduction . . . . .	546
Study and Findings . . . . .	548

Data Analysis and Results. . . . .	548
Discussion. . . . .	553
Sense of Conservation Based on Sense of Place. . . . .	554
Implications. . . . .	555
References. . . . .	557
28 Opening up the Dialogic Space. Using Questions to Facilitate Deeper Informal Learning . . . . .	561
Martin Braund and Anthony Lelliott
What Do We Know About Questioning? . . . . .	562
Questioning Strategies in Formal Classrooms . . . . .	562
Scaffolding . . . . .	563
Cooperative and Collaborative Learning . . . . .	564
Opening up the Dialogic Space—Some Examples from Practice . . . . .	565
What's in a Label? . . . . .	566
Dialogue with Artefacts. . . . .	566
Questions and Challenges at Interactive Exhibits or 'Plores'. . . . .	568
Worksheets . . . . .	569
Conclusions: What Can Be Done to Improve Questioning Techniques in Informal Settings? . . . . .	571
References. . . . .	573
Part VI Conclusion
29 The Need and Timeliness of Preparing Informal Science Educators . . . . .	577
Joy Kubarek
Defining ISE . . . . .	579
Professional Development. . . . .	579
Designing Programs . . . . .	582
Bridging the Gap Between Formal and Informal Educators . . . . .	585
Public Communication . . . . .	588
Conclusion . . . . .	592
References. . . . .	592
Index . . . . .	595

Preparing Informal Science Educators
Perspectives from Science Communication and Education

Patrick, P.G. (Ed.)

2017, XXXIV, 600 p. 53 illus., Hardcover

ISBN: 978-3-319-50396-7