

CONTENTS

1	Introduction: New Food Politics	1
	Food Media and Alternative Food Politics	5
	Analysing Media and Food Industries	14
	Structure of the Book	16
	References	20

Part I Contexts

2	Resisting ‘Agribusiness Apocalypse’: The Pleasures and Politics of Ethical Food	29
	Problems and Solutions	32
	The Politics of Ethical Consumption	39
	Gender and Nostalgia	43
	References	49

3	Food Television and Celebrity Chefs: Lifestyle Branding and Commodified Idyllism	53
	Escaping to River Cottage	55
	A Commodified Idyll	60
	The Two Faces of Jamie Oliver	63
	Cooking from ‘Scratch’ with Processed Foods	66
	Celebrity Brands	72
	References	73

Part II Connections

4 The ‘Social Life’ of Celebrity Brands: Maggie Beer’s Verjuice	79
The Social Life of Things	82
Verjuice and ‘Brand Maggie’	86
A Barossa Tradition	96
Cooking with Verjuice	101
References	103
5 Media Tourism and Rural Romance: Constructing Food Television’s ‘Cult Geographies’	107
Media Pilgrimages	111
A Tasmanian Idyll	114
Farming Gourmet-Style	121
Constructing Cult Geographies	127
References	129
6 ‘It Tastes Better’? Cookbooks, Happy Farmers and Affective Labour	133
The ‘Work’ of Kylie Kwong	136
The Pleasures of Work	139
Passionate Work and the Politics of Representation	149
References	150

Part III Appropriations

7 Media, Supermarkets and the Strategic Manufacture of Consumer Trust	155
Supermarkets Under Attack	160
Neutralising the Noise: Curtis Stone	171
From PR Coup to “PR Fail”: Jamie Oliver	179
Manufacturing Trust	184
References	186

8 Soft-Selling Supermarkets: Food Television and Integrated Advertising	193
Farmer's Choice	198
Converting Recipes to Riches?	207
The Supermarket Soft Sell	214
References	215
 9 Conclusion: A New Politics of Food?	 219
References	223
 References	 225
 Index	 247

<http://www.springer.com/978-3-319-64100-3>

Media and Food Industries

The New Politics of Food

Phillipov, M.

2017, IX, 259 p., Hardcover

ISBN: 978-3-319-64100-3