

Contents

1	Introduction	1
1.1	Price Levels and the Value of Money	3
1.2	Measuring Inflation	10
1.3	The Future of Inflation Measurement	17
1.4	The Long Road to the Current State	17
	References	18
2	What Is Inflation?	21
2.1	Why Does Inflation Matter?	22
2.2	The Language of Inflation	22
2.3	The Role of Inflation in Monetary Economics	24
2.4	Is Inflation Bad?	26
2.5	Some Questions About Inflation	34
2.6	The Common Uses of Inflation	36
2.7	Why Is an Accurate Measure of Inflation Important?	38
2.8	Perceptions of Inflation	38
	References	41

3	The Origins of Inflation Measurement: 1700–1879	45
3.1	Overview	46
3.2	Measuring Price Changes	47
3.3	The Origins of the Basket	48
3.4	Early Price Index Formulae—Dutot and Carli	51
3.5	Indexation in 1780—The American War of Independence	52
3.6	An Early Attempt at Measuring Price Levels Over Time	53
3.7	The Quality of Price Information and the Use of Weights	55
3.8	Towards a Solid Foundation	56
3.9	A Geometric Approach	59
3.10	Laspeyres, Paasche and Drobisch	60
3.11	Early Price Data	62
3.12	The Development of Official Bodies for Price Statistics	63
3.13	The Pace of Development	64
	References	65
4	What Is a Price Index?	69
4.1	Defining a Price Index, Inflation and Index Numbers	69
4.2	The Potential Inputs to Index Numbers Calculation	72
4.3	Some Popular Index Numbers Formulae	73
4.4	Differences in the Estimation of Inflation	86
4.5	Conclusions	88
	References	89
5	The Development of the Cost of Living Index: 1880 to 1946	91
5.1	Price and Expenditure Series Before 1880	93
5.2	The Political Imperative	96
5.3	The Board of Trade Enquiries of 1903	97
5.4	The 1904 Household Expenditure Survey	103
5.5	The 1908 Report—Report of an Enquiry into Working-Class Rents, Housing and Retail Prices	110

5.6	The 1913 Report—Report of an Enquiry into Working-Class Rents and Retail Prices	113
5.7	First World War	118
5.8	The Methodology of the Cost of Living Index Numbers	121
5.9	Indexing Arrangements After the War	124
5.10	The Second World War	126
5.11	Conclusions	127
	References	128
6	The Development of the Retail Prices Index: 1947–1989	131
6.1	Overview	131
6.2	After the War	132
6.3	The Cost of Living Advisory Committee	134
6.4	The Interim Index of Retail Prices	136
6.5	Wider Uses of Budget Enquiries	138
6.6	Report of the Technical Committee	138
6.7	The 1953–54 Budget Enquiry	140
6.8	The Introduction of the New Index	141
6.9	Updating the Expenditure Weights	143
6.10	Meals Out, Housing and Further Indices	145
6.11	Mortgage Interest and Owner Occupiers	149
6.12	Three-Year Weights to One-Year Weights	151
6.13	Major Structural Changes in 1986	151
6.14	Alternative Inflation Measures	153
6.15	Responsibility for Producing the Index	155
6.16	The Retail Prices Index Over the Period 1945–1989	156
6.17	Final Remarks	157
	References	157
7	What's in the Basket?	159
7.1	Why Do We Need the Basket?	160
7.2	The Expansion of the Basket	163
7.3	The Role of Items in the Basket of Goods and Services	163
7.4	More Than One Basket?	165

7.5	Updating the Basket	166
7.6	Identifying Potential New Items and Reviewing Existing Items	166
7.7	Examples of Changes Over Time	168
7.8	Specific Changes for 2017	169
7.9	The Commodity Review Process	170
7.10	Concluding Remarks	170
	References	171
8	Collecting Prices	173
8.1	Introduction	173
8.2	ONS Technical Manual	174
8.3	Historical Methods of Price Collection	175
8.4	Current Price Sampling Procedures	176
8.5	Collecting from Multiple Shop Types	179
8.6	Recording Discounts	179
8.7	Hedonic Regression	181
8.8	Index Day—When to Collect Prices	182
8.9	Sampling Error in Price Measurement	184
8.10	Representativeness of the Sample	185
8.11	Evaluation of the Sampling Design	188
8.12	Hyperinflation	191
8.13	International Issues	191
8.14	Summary	192
	References	193
9	Estimating Household Expenditure Shares	195
9.1	Introduction	195
9.2	Private and Early Official Inquiries into Household Expenditure	196
9.3	The Development of Official Expenditure Surveys	200
9.4	The Uses of Household Expenditure Data	201
9.5	The Living Costs and Food Survey	203
9.6	Challenges of Capturing Expenditure and Income	209
9.7	Quality Assessment of the LCF	213
9.8	The Future of Expenditure Measurement	216

9.9	Conclusions	216
	References	217
10	From the RPI to the CPI: 1990-2011	221
10.1	Early 1990s—Refinement of the RPI	222
10.2	The Adoption of the RPIX as an Inflation Target	224
10.3	Further Developments to the RPI	225
10.4	The Initiation of the Harmonised Index of Consumer Prices	227
10.5	Changing the Target for Inflation from the RPI to CPI	230
10.6	Increased Use of the CPI	233
10.7	Consultations: 2009–2011	235
10.8	Conclusions	238
	References	239
11	Measuring Inflation at a Detailed Level	243
11.1	The Absence of Weights	243
11.2	Elementary Aggregate Formulae	243
11.3	Relationship Between Elementary Aggregate Formulae	248
11.4	Which is the Best Elementary Aggregate Formula?	259
11.5	Conclusion	261
	References	262
12	What Should We Be Measuring?	265
12.1	Cost of Living Vs. Cost of Goods	266
12.2	What Is a Cost of Living Index?	268
12.3	The History of Arguments Around the Cost of Living Index	274
12.4	How the Cost of Living Can Change Even if Prices Stay the Same	278
12.5	What Do Price Indices Measure?	279
12.6	Are We Close to a True Cost of Living Index?	283
	References	284

13	Recent Developments: 2012–2016	287
13.1	Overview	287
13.2	Governance	288
13.3	The Formula Effect and the RPI Consultation: 2012	290
13.4	Owner Occupiers' Housing	301
13.5	The Johnson Review	311
13.6	Concluding Remarks	320
	References	321
14	Other Price Indices	333
14.1	The Producer Price Index	334
14.2	Import and Export Prices	344
14.3	Services Producer Price Index	347
14.4	House Price Index	349
14.5	Implied Deflators	351
14.6	Purchasing Power Parity	351
	References	352
15	A Look to the Future	355
15.1	Web Scraping	356
15.2	Recommendations of the Johnson Review	358
15.3	Inflation by Demographic Group	361
15.4	Accounting for Fashion	362
15.5	Changes in the Weights Used in Index Numbers	363
15.6	Who Will Determine the Future?	364
15.7	Conclusions	367
	References	367
	Index	371

Inflation

History and Measurement

O'Neill, R.; Ralph, J.; Smith, P.

2017, XXIV, 375 p. 10 illus., Hardcover

ISBN: 978-3-319-64124-9