

Contents

1	Tao Yuanming and the Meta-question of Humanity	1
1.1	Tao as an Oriental Prophet of the Meta-question of Humanity	2
1.2	Tao: The Avatar of Nature	6
1.2.1	Following the True and the Natural	7
1.2.2	Abandon and Aloofness	10
1.2.3	Unintendedness and Resignation to Nature's Transformation.	14
1.3	Dwelling Poetically in Nature	17
1.4	The Nature and Naturalness of Tao's Poetry	19
1.5	Tao's Greatness Out of Nature-Centrism	22
1.6	Nature: The Intersection of Two Philosophies	26
2	Tao Yuanming's Natural Philosophy	33
2.1	Tao's Philosophizing	35
2.2	The Significance of Nature in the Sinosphere	38
2.3	The Modern Evolution of Daoist Natural Philosophy	41
2.4	"Knowing the Bright but Cleaving to the Dark" and "Tao's Names"	46
2.5	"Knowing the Bright but Cleaving to the Dark" and Tao's Wisdom of Life	49
2.6	Tao's "Knowing the Bright but Cleaving to the Dark" and Heidegger's Philosophy	54
3	Tao Yuanming and Naturalistic Romanticism	61
3.1	The European Romantic Literary Tradition and Nature.	62
3.2	Tao as an Ancient Oriental Natural Romantic Poet	66
3.3	Tao's Foreign "Naturalistic Soulmates"	68
3.4	Tao and Rousseau: From Civil Men to Natural Men	75
3.5	Tao and Thoreau: The Creation of Dreamy Nature and Freedom in a Poetic Ambience	82

4 The Evolving Perception of Nature and the Death of Tao Yuanming	91
4.1 The Evolving Perception of “Nature” in the History of Chinese Literature	92
4.2 The Origin and Development of Tao’s Poetic Conception.	97
4.3 A Turning Point in Tao’s Reception	104
4.4 The Modern Literary Revolution and Tao	107
4.5 The Death of Tao	113
5 The Specter of Tao and the Plights of Contemporary Human Existence.	119
5.1 The “Specter” and Derrida’s “Specter” Theory	121
5.2 Tao as a Specter in the Kingdom of Poetry	123
5.3 Can Man Resort to the Specter?	127
5.4 The Specter of Tao and the Plights of Contemporary Human Existence	132
5.4.1 The Perception of the Enlightened: The Cage and the Disciplined Society	133
5.4.2 Return: Regressivism and Progressivism	137
5.4.3 A Pure Heart and Cheerful Chanting: Honorable Poverty and the Consumer Society.	142
5.4.4 The Tranquil Southern Mount: Leisure and Work Ethic	148
5.4.5 Chanting in the Field: Tianyuan Poetry and Agricultural Society.	151
5.4.6 The Complexity of the “Peach-blossom Springs”: An Oriental Utopia and Post-modern Romanticism.	155
Conclusion: The Last Sacrifice and the Evocation	161
References	163

The Ecological Era and Classical Chinese Naturalism

A Case Study of Tao Yuanming

Lu, S.

2017, XXII, 167 p., Hardcover

ISBN: 978-981-10-1782-7