

Contents

1	Introduction to Study	1
1.1	Contextualizing Singapore, a Developmental City-state	1
1.1.1	Singapore's Urban Landscape and Public Space	2
1.2	Framing the Study	5
1.2.1	Objectives	6
1.2.2	Dimensions of Analyses	6
1.3	Definitions and Ways of Thinking About Public Space	8
1.3.1	Ethics and Aesthetics of Public Space	9
1.3.2	The 'Ethics' Discourse	10
1.3.3	The 'Aesthetics' Discourse	14
1.3.4	Situating Singapore Public Space	16
1.4	Towards a Methodology	17
1.4.1	A 'Constructed' Notion of Public Space	18
1.4.2	Situating Spatial Practice	19
1.4.3	Summary: Framework and Methodology for the Study	21
2	The State, People and the History of Urban Public Space in Singapore.	23
2.1	Shaping the Singaporean Public	23
2.1.1	Occupations and Influx: Colonial Singapore, Immigration, and the Japanese Occupation	24
2.1.2	Rough Times and Independence	26
2.1.3	Lee Kuan Yew, Values and Culture	27
2.1.4	'The Next Lap': The 1990s, 2000s and Beyond	35
2.1.5	Political Trajectories	38
2.1.6	Cultural and Social Trajectories	38
2.2	A Brief History of Urban Public Space in Singapore	42
2.2.1	Public Space in Singapore: A Short History	42
2.2.2	Urban Trajectories	56

3 Case Studies	59
3.1 Selection of Case Studies	59
3.2 Orchard Road as Conduit: Between Nostalgia and Authenticity	61
3.2.1 Framing Orchard Road	64
3.2.2 Orchard Road—A Brief History	65
3.2.3 Compression of Time and Images	68
3.2.4 Compression of People and Practices	73
3.2.5 Compression of Scale and Perception	81
3.2.6 Narratives of Loss and “Absence”	88
3.2.7 Constructed Authenticities and Their Legitimacy	91
3.3 Little India: Spaces of Ethnicity, Exchange and Boundedness	96
3.3.1 Framing Little India	97
3.3.2 Little India—A Brief History	98
3.3.3 Space of Representation of Culture	102
3.3.4 “Insiders” and “Outsiders”	105
3.3.5 Space of Exchange	108
3.3.6 “Fronts”	108
3.3.7 Spaces of Boundedness	115
3.3.8 “Thresholds”	116
3.3.9 “Sunday Enclaves”	118
3.3.10 Ethnicity, Exchange and Boundedness	128
3.4 Public Housing Spaces: Spatial Practices in Transition	130
3.4.1 Framing Public Housing	130
3.4.2 Singapore Public Housing—A Brief History	131
3.4.3 Urban Design Politics Versus Spatial Practice	143
3.4.4 Persistent Spatial Practices	144
3.4.5 New Spatial Practices	149
3.4.6 Defiant Spatial Practices	154
3.4.7 Spatial Practices in Transition	158
4 Themes and Modes of Production of Singapore Public Space	161
4.1 Constructing Public Space: Themes	161
4.1.1 Identity: Ethnic Space, Ethnoscape, and (Spaces of) Exchange	161
4.1.2 Place: Non-place, “-Scape,” and Images of Elsewhere	164
4.1.3 Congested Space and Compressed Time	166
4.1.4 Programs: Programmed Space, Scale of Engagement, and Choice	168
4.1.5 Continuity and Change: Everyday Life Space	169
4.1.6 Control: Negotiated Space	170
4.1.7 Public Space in Flux	172

4.2	Modes, Methods of Production and Representation of Public Space.	173
4.2.1	Traditional Space.	175
4.2.2	Transferred Space	176
4.2.3	Transgressed Space	177
4.2.4	Transformed Space (or Space in Translation)	179
4.3	Situating Singapore Public Space—Bases of Difference	182
4.3.1	The Uses and Functions of Public Space and Their Modes of Transmission	182
4.3.2	Mechanisms: Public-Space-in-Practice.	188
4.3.3	Bases of Difference: Singapore Public Space	190
5	Rethinking Public Space: The Singapore Model.	197
5.1	Towards a Singapore Model of Public Space	197
5.2	Rethinking Public Space.	200
5.2.1	Deliberative Democracy Versus Agonistic Pluralism.	201
5.2.2	Public-Space-in-Practice	202
5.2.3	Communitarian Versus Individual	203
5.2.4	Nostalgia Versus New Sociabilities.	203
5.3	Trajectories: Aspects of Singaporean Life with Possible Impacts on Public Space.	204
5.4	New Paradigms in Singapore Public Space	205
5.4.1	Space-Time Dimension	205
5.4.2	Spaces of Exchange.	206
5.4.3	Space Menus.	206
5.4.4	New Technologies in Space	207
5.4.5	Home-Ground	207
5.4.6	Degree of Control	207
5.4.7	Design Framework	208
5.5	Futures and Implications for Design.	208
5.6	Conclusion: The Singapore Model in Transition.	211
	Glossary.	213
	Bibliography	217

Constructing Singapore Public Space

Hee, L.

2017, XV, 222 p. 47 illus., Hardcover

ISBN: 978-981-10-2385-9