

Contents

1 Introduction: Peculiar Time	1
1.1 Movement and Technology for Contemporary Audiences	1
1.2 What is Kinetic Sculpture and Kineticism?	2
1.3 Exhibiting Kinetic Art	4
1.4 Time, Contemporaneity, and Kinetic Art	6
1.5 What is Contemporary Art?	7
1.6 Talking about time	10
1.7 Chapter Outline	12
References	17
2 Revolutions—Forms That Turn	21
2.1 Revolving, Rotating, Mirroring	23
2.2 Cum-Tempore (with Time)	25
2.3 Avant-Garde Kinetic Artworks at the Biennale	27
2.4 Conclusion: Contemporary Exhibition of Modern Kinesis	32
References	33
3 Directions in Kinetic Art: Expanding Spectres of Time	35
3.1 Problems with Time and Technology in Art in the 1960s	37
3.2 Against Duration: Art and Objecthood	41
3.3 Directions in Kinetic Art at the Berkeley Museum (1966)	44
3.4 Orchestrating Time: Jean Tinguely's Auto-Destructive Machines	47
3.5 Conclusion: Technological Expansion and New Durations	53
References	55
4 Systems Aesthetics: A Key Polemic in Contemporary Kinetic Art History	57
4.1 Key Understandings of Jack Burnham's 'Systems Esthetics'	59
4.2 Burnham's Turbulent Relationship with Kineticism	64
4.3 Hans Haacke's Kinetic Systems	68

4.4	Conclusion: Ontologically Unstable Movement Systems	71
	References	72
5	Digital Determinism: A Post-kinetic and Dematerialised Time	75
5.1	Popper's Post-kinetic Analysis	77
5.2	Technological Determinism	80
5.3	Breaking Away from Binary Associations	83
5.4	Anthony McCall's Line Describing a Cone	86
5.5	Movement as Emergent and Incipient	90
5.6	Materiality, Participation and Anticipation	94
	References	95
6	Three Key Influences of the Kinetic Aesthetic: Henri Bergson, László Moholy-Nagy and Naum Gabo	97
6.1	Resensationalising Early Modern Kineticism	99
6.2	Bergson: Modern Western Movement, and Duration	101
6.3	Moholy-Nagy: New Perceptions of Time and Technological Expansion	104
6.4	Blurring Time with Virtual Volumes	110
6.5	Accumulating Temporalities	113
6.6	Pioneering a Kinetic a Consciousness of Time	118
	References	120
7	Your Negotiable Panorama: The Seeping Edges of Perceiving Yourself Perceiving	121
7.1	Frank Popper: From Kinetic to Virtual Art	123
7.1.1	Your Negotiable Panorama	125
7.2	Intersections with the Virtual: Eliasson, Deleuze and Bergson	129
7.3	Deleuze's Crystalline Experiences of Temporality	132
7.4	Conclusion: Resensationalising Kinetic Trends	134
	References	135
8	Conclusion: Consciousness of Time: Looking Back and Moving Forward	137
	References	145
	Index	147

<http://www.springer.com/978-981-10-4704-6>

Movement, Time, Technology, and Art

Chau, C.

2017, VI, 148 p., Hardcover

ISBN: 978-981-10-4704-6