

Contents

Part I Global Imbalances: From the Monetary Perspective

1 The Rise and Fall of Monetary Hegemony	5
1.1 The Era of the Hegemony of Pound Sterling Ushered in by “The Empire on Which the Sun Never Sets”	5
1.2 Gold as the Standard	7
1.3 Trade, Investment and Imbalances Under Classical Golden Standard	9
1.4 The Global Creditor	9
1.5 Early Version of “The End of History”	12
1.6 The “Lame Duck” Gold Standard and Its Disintegration	14
1.7 The Hegemony of the US Dollars Born in the “Woods”	16
1.8 The “Original Sin” of the Bretton Woods System	17
1.9 The Ruble Zone: A “Parallel” International Monetary System not to be Forgotten	18
1.10 Operation of the Ruble Zone	20
1.11 Disintegration of the Ruble Zone	23
1.12 Legacies of the Ruble Zone	25
1.13 Monetary Hegemony from the Perspective of International Public Goods	26
References.	29
2 The Warring States	31
2.1 Diversification of the Reserve: Creation of SDR	32
2.2 Diversification of Reserve Currency: The Emergence of the Euro	33
2.3 Diversification of Reserve Currency: The Demand of Asia	36
2.4 The Global Imbalances Under the Center-Periphery Structure	40
2.5 The Warring States	42
2.6 Never Forget John Keynes	44

2.7	The Ubiquity of the Triffin Dilemma	46
2.8	Break Free from the Myth of Single Currency	49
2.9	Explore New Paths While Salvaging the Crisis	51
2.10	Dealing with the “9.11” Incident: The System of Payment and Clearance Is the Key	52
2.11	Dealing with the Current Financial Crisis: Currency Swap Gaining Popularity	53
2.12	International Monetary System to Be Transformed by Central Banks’ Currency Swap	55
2.13	Central Bank Currency Swap with China at the Center	57
2.14	A New Model of Global Governance Model Is Emerging?	57
	References.	61

Part II Global Imbalances: From the Perspective of Real Economy

3	Transformation of International Division of Labor and Global Imbalances	67
3.1	The Modern World System	67
3.2	Six Hundred Years in Retrospect—A Bird’s Eye	70
3.3	Silver as Capital (Prior to 1800).	72
3.4	“The Hundred Years of Peace (1800–1913)”	73
3.5	The Victorian Era.	76
3.6	Now It’s the Turn of the United States.	79
3.7	Oscillating Between Balance and Imbalance.	82
3.8	Globalization and International Division of Labor	83
3.9	The Disintegration of the Soviet-Eastern Bloc and the New Pattern of International Division of Labor	85
3.10	Production Network of East Asia and Restructuring of Global Value Chain	89
	References.	95
4	Innovation of Technology, Changes in Productivity, and Global Imbalances	97
4.1	Innovation and Finance: The Macro Model of Technological Transformation	97
4.2	Innovation and Changes in Productivity: “Condoning” the External Imbalance	102
4.3	Enduring Prosperity as an “Exception”?	105
4.4	Technological Revolution and Long Cycle of Economy.	111
4.5	A New Round of Technological Revolution Is Taking Shape Again.	113
	References.	116

Part III From Imbalances to Financial Crisis

5 Internal and External Imbalances and Currency Hegemony	119
5.1 Global Imbalances: “Old Tales Retold”
Since the End of WWII	119
5.2 Global Imbalances from the Perspective
of Saving—Investment	122
5.3 Three Phases of Imbalances Since the 1970s	126
5.4 Imbalances as the Normality, Currency Hegemony
as the Root Cause.	127
5.5 The Great Depression: Gold Being the Culprit?	129
5.6 Another Explanation for the Great Depression:
The Missing Hegemony	132
5.7 Collapse of the Bretton Woods System and Stagflation of the 1970s	133
5.8 “The Original Sin” and the Asian Financial Crisis	136
5.9 From “Great Moderation” to Long-Term Imbalances	139
5.10 Sustainability of Imbalances	140
5.11 From Imbalances to Financial Crisis.	143
References.	148

Part IV The Mechanism of Rebalancing

6 Two Myths of Rebalancing	155
6.1 The “Golden Age” of Gold Standard (1870–1914).	156
6.2 Self-adjustment Mechanism: Myth or Fact?	158
6.3 Essence of the Gold Standard: The Hegemony of Pound	160
6.4 Old and New Versions of the “Myth” of Floating Exchange
Rate	161
6.5 Views Opposing the Floating Exchange Rate.	164
6.6 Four Facts Contradicting Floating Exchange Rate	167
6.7 Japan’s “Financial Defeat” and the “Syndrome of Appreciation of Yen”.	169
6.8 Dollar Hegemony Is the Crux of Issue	173
6.9 Abstract Theory Should Never Be Equaled to Reality	174
References.	175
7 Monetary Statecraft and Profits of Dollar Hegemony	177
7.1 Foreign Exchange Rate as Weapon and Monetary Statecraft	178
7.2 Intervention in Foreign Exchange Market.	180
7.3 Exchange Rate Manipulation	182
7.4 A Thief Crying “Stop Thief”	185
7.5 Gains from the Exchange Rate Weapon: The Dollar Hegemony
as an Example	190
References.	197

8	International Monetary Policy Coordination:
	Theories and Reality	199
8.1	Theories of International Monetary Policy Coordination.	200
8.2	Fifty Years of Monetary Policy Coordination.	204
8.3	The 1970s: A Few Successful Attempts at Monetary Policy Coordination.	205
8.4	From the Plaza Agreement to the Louvre Accord.	207
8.5	G20 as the New Platform of Global Policy Coordination.	212
8.6	Wrestling at the G20 Summit.	213
8.7	The “Mutual Assessment Process” (MAP)	229
8.8	“The Indicative Guidelines”	230
8.9	Epitome of Hegemony and Anti-hegemony Movement	231
8.10	A Game Without an End	232
	References.	234
Part V	Conclusion
9	Moving Towards a New Balance	237
9.1	A Millennium of Vicissitudes.	238
9.2	The Old Global Economic Pattern	239
9.3	Things Are Changing	242
9.4	China Is Rising.	244
9.5	Crisis Ushered in a New Era	247
9.6	From “Made in China” to “Invented in China”	248
9.7	Internationalization of RMB: “Strength of China” in International Monetary System Transition	250
9.8	Make the Best of the Shanghai Free Trade Zone (SHFTZ)	252
	References.	254
References		255

Imbalance and Rebalance

To Create a New Framework of Global Governance

Li, Y.; Zhang, X.

2017, XVI, 257 p. 54 illus., Hardcover

ISBN: 978-981-10-6149-3