

CONTENTS

1	Introduction: Awkward Partners in the North?	1
	Malin Stegmann McCallion and Alex Brianson
2	As Awkward as They Need to Be: Denmark's Pragmatic Activist Approach to Europe	13
	Anders Wivel
3	Re-Assessing Finland's Integration Policy: The End of Domestic Consensus?	35
	Hanna Ojanen and Tapio Raunio
4	Swedish Awkwardness à La Carte? The Difference a Question Mark Can Make	59
	Malin Stegmann McCallion
5	From 'Awkward Partner' to 'Awkward Partnership'? Explaining Norway's Paradoxical Relations with the European Union	79
	Stefan Gänzle and Thomas Henökl
6	Iceland: The Dominant Party in Thrall to Its Past Discourse	103
	Baldur Thorhallsson

7	Conclusions—Awkward Nordics and the Study of Regional Integration	129
	Alex Brianson
	Index	141

<http://www.springer.com/978-3-319-57561-2>

Nordic States and European Integration

Awkward Partners in the North?

Stegmann McCallion, M.; Brianson, A. (Eds.)

2018, XIII, 143 p. 2 illus., Hardcover

ISBN: 978-3-319-57561-2