Contents

1 Introduction: Military Coup D'état as a Two-Level Game 1
Dancing on Two Fronts 1
Motive vs. Opportunity 6
Book Structure and Methodology 9
A Survey of the Civil-Military Relations Field 14
Domestic Factors 15
Weak Politicians and Regimes 18
External Factors 22
References 28

2 External Support and Military Coups D'état During the Cold War 39
The External Actor 39
Military, Political, and Economic Assistance 52
Discussion 87
References 94

3 Two Military Coups in Turkey and One Unwavering Supporter 107
May 27 Coup and the US Role 107
US Foreign Policy Toward Turkey 110
The Road to the 1960 Coup d'état 115
Transformation of the Military 117

Turkey's First Coup D'état 122
The External Dimension 128
Soviet Overtures Turned Down 136
Commitment Proven 138
Appointment of Foreign Minister 142
The US Role 143
Military-to-Military Proximity 149
Political Support 155
Military and Economic Assistance 160
Discussion 164
The 1980 Coup D'état in Turkey 166
Turkish—American Relations in the 1970s 167
The External Dimension 169
Another Surprise Coup? 171
Courting Western Assent 173
Appointment of the Foreign Minister 175
The Rogers Plan 175
The US Reaction 177
Military and Economic Assistance 184
Discussion 186
References 187

4 Pakistan: Two Coups, a Single Backer for the 'Most Allied-Ally'? 201
Two Quick Coups 202
US Foreign Policy Toward Pakistan 206
Face-to-Face in Uniforms 209
The Road to Coups D'état 213
US Reactions to the Coups 216
Political Support 220
Post-Coup Assistance 224
Discussion 230
July 1977 Coup D'état 231
The Road to the Coup 233
A Surprise Coup? 236
Generals' Care for US Reaction 238
US Involvement 240
Political Support 248

Military and Economic Assistance 250
Discussion 253
References 253

5 Conclusion:The United States and Militaries in Turkey and Pakistan After the Cold War 265
US Involvement 270
Conclusion 277
References 284

Index 291

http://www.springer.com/978-3-319-66010-3

The United States and Military Coups in Turkey and Pakistan
Between Conspiracy and Reality
Aslan, Ö.
2018, XV, 294 p. 6 illus. in color., Hardcover
ISBN: 978-3-319-66010-3