

Contents

1	Introduction	1
	References	8
2	Architectural Concept: Location Versus Tradition of a Design Philosophy	9
	References	21
3	Mass Communication and Public Space	23
3.1	Elite Stage—Compact and Clear City Composition	38
3.2	Popularization Stage—Polycentric Composition	41
3.3	Specialization Stage in the Industrial Cities of the Twentieth Century—Specialized System Versus Loss of Legibility of Urban Structures	42
3.4	Multimedia Stage of Mass Communication—Urban Spaces of Information Society	44
	References	48
4	Strategies for the Development of Public Spaces in the Era of Mass Communication	49
4.1	Social Media	51
4.2	Public Consultation	54
4.3	Urban Space Activation	54
4.4	Design Verification	55
	References	56
5	Cityscape: Dominant Functions and the Role in the City Structure	57
6	Designing the Living and Working Space of the Creative Class	65
6.1	The Creative Process and Spatial Environment	66

6.2	In Search for Identity: Advanced Technologies, Natural and Historical Values in Architecture for Creative Class . . . . .	72
	References . . . . .	74
7	Architectural Landscape in Mass Media Coverage . . . . .	75
7.1	Architecture as Scenography in the Mass Media Event, Supporting Creation of Place—Brand . . . . .	75
7.2	New Stylistic Architectural Forms Based on the Creation and Distribution of Symbols and Metaphors . . . . .	78
7.3	Place as the Subject of Fashion Created by the Media . . . . .	85
7.4	The Perception of Architecture on Online Maps—The Fifth Facade . . . . .	96
7.5	Media Message as an Element of Architectural Space . . . . .	96
	References . . . . .	101
8	Place Brand-Building: Influencing Emotional Perception of Urban Spaces Through Social Media . . . . .	103
8.1	Mapping Emotions . . . . .	105
8.2	Sense of Community . . . . .	106
	References . . . . .	107
9	Spatial Transformations and Work-Related Mobility . . . . .	109
9.1	Expansion: Increase in Use of Space . . . . .	109
9.2	Inversion: The Loss of Function . . . . .	113
9.3	Intensification of Development and Transformations Within the Existing Structure of the City . . . . .	113
9.4	Adaptation of Existing Structures . . . . .	115
9.5	Reconfiguration—Kinetic Architecture . . . . .	119
9.6	Negotiation—Changes of a Functional Space Division . . . . .	124
	References . . . . .	132
10	New Urban Developments in Genoa, Milan and Trento as an Illustration of Spatial Transformations Designed in Response to Change in Socio-economic System . . . . .	133
10.1	Genoa, the “Waterfront” Project . . . . .	135
10.2	Milan, the “FALCK” Project . . . . .	148
10.3	Trento, Project for the Post-industrial Areas of Michelin . . . . .	149
10.4	Building an Image Based on the Relationship with the Existing Context of the City and Development of the Social Communication Space . . . . .	151
	References . . . . .	152
11	Conclusion . . . . .	153

Cityscape in the Era of Information and Communication
Technologies

Bonenberg, A.

2018, VI, 154 p. 89 illus., 48 illus. in color., Hardcover

ISBN: 978-3-319-69541-9