

Contents

1	Introduction	1
1.1	Leading Change in Educational Organisations	2
1.2	The Fallacy of Innovation and Transformational Thinking in the Pursuit of Excellence	4
1.3	Sense-Making: Using Technology as a Trigger for Finding Organisational Meaning	9
1.3.1	Sense-Making Is Social in Nature	9
1.3.2	Sense-Making Is Grounded in Identity Construction	10
1.3.3	Sense-Making Is Retrospective	11
1.3.4	Sense-Making Is Enactive of Sensible Environments	12
1.3.5	Sense-Making Is Ongoing	12
1.3.6	Sense-Making Is Focused on and by Extracted Cues	13
1.3.7	Sense-Making Is Driven by Plausibility Rather Than Accuracy	15
1.3.8	Sense-Giving	15
1.4	Scenarios as Tools for Sense-Making and Sense-Giving	17
1.5	Framing Technologically Catalysed Change in Higher Education as a Wicked Problem	20
1.5.1	Problem Formulation	21
1.5.2	Relationship Between Problem and Solution	21
1.5.3	Testability of Potential Solutions	22
1.5.4	Finality of Problem Resolution	23
1.5.5	Tractability of Problem Elements	23
1.5.6	Explanatory Power of Problem Characteristics	24
1.5.7	Level of Analysis	24
1.5.8	Reproducibility of the Problem	24

1.5.9	Replicability of the Problem	25
1.5.10	Responsibility for Problem Resolution	25
1.6	Structure of the Book	29

Part I Making Sense of the Context for Change in Higher Education

2	Part I Introduction	33
3	The Scale and Scope of Higher Education	47
3.1	Globalisation and International Education	51
3.2	Élite, Mass and Universal Higher Education	57
3.2.1	Access to Higher Education	60
3.2.2	Educational Careers	62
3.2.3	Curriculum Shifts and the Increasing Scope of Higher Education	63
3.2.4	Relationships with Academic Faculty	64
3.2.5	Organisational Implications of the Shift to Mass and Universal Modes	67
3.2.6	Coexistence of Élite, Mass and Universal Models	68
3.2.7	Impact on National Education Systems	71
3.3	Conclusion	74
4	Internal and External Stakeholders in Higher Education	77
4.1	Students, Parents, Alumni and Donors	79
4.2	Academic Faculty	82
4.3	Managers, Administrators and Professional Staff	85
4.3.1	The Third Space	87
4.4	Institutions	87
4.5	Employers	88
4.6	Vendors	89
4.6.1	The Business of Online Programme Management OPM	91
4.7	Government	95
4.8	Society	96
4.9	Non-consuming Stakeholders	97
4.10	Stakeholder Salience in Élite, Mass and Universal Education	97
4.11	Conclusion	101
5	Financial Challenges, Constraints and Consequences of Funding Higher Education	103
5.1	What Does a Degree Cost?	104
5.2	Wealth, Inequality and Student Debt	109
5.3	Higher Education and Productivity Growth	112
5.3.1	Personal Economic Benefit of Higher Education	113

5.3.2	National Economic Benefit of Higher Education	116
5.3.3	Sustaining the Economic Benefit of Higher Education Over a Lifetime	118
5.4	Higher Education's Cost Disease	119
5.5	Conclusion	120
6	Qualifications as a Defining Feature of Higher Education	123
6.1	Qualifications as Positional Goods	124
6.2	Qualifications as Material Goods—The Myth of Human Capital Theory	128
6.3	Systemic Responses to the Growing Complexity of Qualification Systems	131
6.4	The Declining Value of Formal Qualifications	133
6.5	Conclusion	138
 Part II Technology
7	Part II Introduction	143
8	Technology as a Catalyst for Change	147
8.1	The Social Impact of Technological Change	149
8.2	Predicting the Future of Technology in a World of Accelerating Change	155
8.3	The Cognitive Challenge of Multiple Time Horizons	160
8.4	Technology as a Platform	162
8.5	Conclusion	166
9	Lessons from the Failure of the Virtual University	167
9.1	Failures	170
9.1.1	Knowledge Universe, UNext and Cardean University	170
9.1.2	AllLearn	171
9.1.3	Fathom	172
9.1.4	Jones International University	173
9.1.5	US Open University	174
9.1.6	The UK eUniversity Worldwide	174
9.1.7	Babson Interactive, NYUOnline and Virtual Temple	176
9.1.8	Universitas 21 Global	177
9.1.9	Global University Alliance	179
9.2	Successes	180
9.2.1	University of Phoenix	180
9.2.2	Western Governors University	181
9.2.3	Capella University	182
9.2.4	eCornell, Penn State World Campus and UMassOnline	183

9.3	Making Sense of the Virtual University	184
9.3.1	The Race to Be the First to Succeed	185
9.3.2	Not All Qualifications Are Created Equal	186
9.3.3	The World Is Not That Flat	188
9.3.4	IT Doesn't Matter	189
9.3.5	Sustaining the Cost of Business in a Dynamic World	190
9.3.6	Managing Collaborations with Diverse Partners	191
9.3.7	Reputations and Brands	192
9.3.8	Faculty Engagement	194
9.3.9	Strategic Vision and Leadership	195
9.4	Conclusion	196
10	Technology and Modern Students—The Digital Natives Fallacy . . .	197
10.1	The New Literacies of the Digital World	199
10.2	The Practice Effect	202
10.3	Multitasking	204
10.4	Conclusion: Deconstructing the Technocratic Narrative of the Digital Native	209
11	Open Education: A Parable of Change in Higher Education	213
11.1	What Does 'Open' Mean?	215
11.1.1	Open Technology	215
11.1.2	Open Societies	218
11.1.3	Open Democracy	222
11.1.4	Open Economies	223
11.1.5	Open Speech	223
11.1.6	Open Reasoning	225
11.1.7	Open Provision	227
11.2	Massive Open Online Courses	227
11.2.1	The Race to Be the First to Succeed	229
11.2.2	Sustaining the Cost of Business in a Dynamic World	231
11.2.3	IT Doesn't Matter	233
11.2.4	Faculty Engagement with MOOCs	234
11.2.5	Managing Collaborations with Diverse Partners	235
11.2.6	The World Is Not That Flat	236
11.2.7	Reputations and Brands	238
11.2.8	Not All Qualifications Are Created Equal	238
11.2.9	Strategic Vision and Leadership	241
11.3	Badges and Micro-credentials	243
11.4	Conclusion	247

12 The Modern Technological University	253
12.1 The Impact of Technology on Scholarly Work	254
12.1.1 Technology Enabled Academic Communities	255
12.1.2 Technology and Academic Use of Knowledge	256
12.2 Technology and the Evolution of University Teaching	258
12.2.1 Technology and Numbers	259
12.2.2 Learning Management Systems and the No Significant Difference Phenomenon	260
12.2.3 Clickers and Classroom Feedback Systems	262
12.3 Technology and the Evolution of the University Infrastructure	264
12.3.1 Learning Spaces and the Affirmation of the Physical Campus in a Digital World	264
12.3.2 Cloud	267
12.3.3 BYOD: Staff and Students Creating Their Own Infrastructure	269
12.4 Technology and the Administration of Universities	271
12.4.1 Learning and Academic Analytics	272
12.4.2 Ethical and Organisational Challenges Raised by Analytics	276
12.5 Conclusion: The Role of Technology in the Systemic Change of Higher Education Organisations	278
 Part III Sensemaking and Change in Higher Education
13 Part III Introduction	283
14 Making Sense of the University's Purposes, Values and Culture	289
14.1 Organisational Values and Culture	291
14.2 Organisational Purposes	295
14.3 Defining the Core Ideology of the University	298
14.4 Organisational Structure and the Management of Higher Education	300
14.5 ITP-Z Case Study	303
14.5.1 Reversing the Decline in Capability	306
14.5.2 Strategic Investment in Key Programmes	306
14.5.3 Sense-Giving Models	307
14.5.4 Staff Skills Development	307
14.5.5 Impact of the Change Activities	309
14.5.6 Key Lessons	310
14.6 Conclusion	312
15 Quality as Sense-Making	315
15.1 Gresham's Law, Trust and the Unintended Consequences of Misaligned Quality Systems	319

15.2	Stakeholder Influence on the Definition of Quality	325
15.3	Quality Models and Frameworks	329
15.4	Quality as Sense-Making	337
15.4.1	Social	338
15.4.2	Identity	338
15.4.3	Retrospective	339
15.4.4	Enactive	339
15.4.5	Ongoing	339
15.4.6	Cues	339
15.4.7	Plausibility	340
15.4.8	Sense-Giving	340
15.5	Defining a Framework for Quality as Sense-Making	341
15.6	Conclusion: Starting the Quality Sense-Making Conversation	345
16	Using Evidence to Guide Sense-Making	349
16.1	Quality Indicators	354
16.2	Validation of Quality Frameworks and Indicators	355
16.3	Quality Ranking of Educational Institutions	361
16.4	Total Quality Management	365
16.5	Capability Maturity Models	367
16.6	Case Study: Using the EMM to Analyse a Sector	372
16.7	Collaborative Benchmarking	383
16.8	Conclusion	384
17	Making Sense of Change	387
17.1	Why Change?	392
17.2	Organisational Change Theories	394
17.2.1	Systems Change Models	396
17.2.2	Biological Change Models	397
17.2.3	Rational or Teleological Change Models	398
17.2.4	Institutional, Resource and Contingency Change Models	399
17.2.5	Political and Psychological Change Models	399
17.2.6	Social, Postmodern and Cultural Models of Change	400
17.3	Sustaining and Disruptive Change	401
17.4	Conclusion: Change Leadership	406
 Part IV Leading Change in Higher Education Through Sense-Giving
18	Part IV Introduction	411
19	Strategic Planning as Sense-Making	413
19.1	Strategy and Uncertainty	415

19.2	Porters Five Forces as a Tool for Sense-Making	419
19.2.1	Porter's Threat of Substitute Products	419
19.2.2	Porter's Threat of New Entrants	421
19.2.3	Porter's Bargaining Power of Buyers	425
19.2.4	Bargaining Power of Suppliers	426
19.2.5	Rivalry Among Existing Competitors	427
19.3	Using the Cues from MOOCs to Illustrate Strategy as Sense-Making	429
19.3.1	Threat of Substitute Products	431
19.3.2	Threat of New Entrants	432
19.3.3	Power of Buyers	433
19.3.4	Bargaining Power of Suppliers	434
19.3.5	Rivalry Among Existing Competitors	434
19.4	Conclusion	435
20	Futures Scenarios as Tools for Sense-Giving and Sense-Making . . .	437
20.1	An Introduction to Scenario Modelling for Change	439
20.2	Scenario Modelling Applied to Higher Education Through the Lens of the Forces for Change	441
20.2.1	Adam Smith's Invisible Hand	441
20.2.2	Cardinal Newman's Educational Theocracy	447
20.2.3	The Chinese Dragon	449
20.2.4	Dr. Strangelove's Solution	450
20.2.5	The Digital Agora	452
20.2.6	The Economic Powerhouse	454
20.2.7	The Expanding Universe of H.G. Wells	455
20.2.8	The Ivory Cybertower	457
20.2.9	The Malthusian Collapse	459
20.2.10	Marxist Collective Ownership of Education	461
20.2.11	The Modern Academy	463
20.2.12	Rousseau and the Spiritual Malaise	464
20.2.13	The Star Trek Academy	466
20.2.14	The Technological Singularity	468
20.2.15	Xanadu	471
20.3	Conclusion	473
21	Sense-Giving and Leadership	479
21.1	Bringing a Diverse Group of People with You	480
21.2	Leadership Sense-Giving Strategies in Response to the Forces for Change	481
21.2.1	Scale	483
21.2.2	Stakeholders	484
21.2.3	Finance	485
21.2.4	Qualifications	486

21.2.5	Technology	487
21.3	Sense-Giving Leadership as an Antidote for Transformation Thinking	489
Part V Conclusion
22	Conclusion	495
22.1	Summarising the Wicked Problem	495
22.2	Engaging with the Wicked Problem	501
22.3	Realising a World Without Educational Limits	509
	References	511

Shaping the University of the Future
Using Technology to Catalyse Change in University
Learning and Teaching
Marshall, S.J.
2018, XVIII, 592 p. 32 illus., 13 illus. in color., Hardcover
ISBN: 978-981-10-7619-0